Hanoi Oil Depots Bombed

Heavy Damage Reported

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. jet planes set raging fires with bombs and rockets today in previously-immune fuel depots of Hanoi and Haiphong, representing about 60 per cent of North Viet Nam's strategic oil supply. World reaction boiled up while smoke still soared above the flames.

One target area of the raids, which pilots described as highly successful, was three miles from the centre of Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital. The other was in the dock area of Haiphong, two miles from the heart of that major port.

The U.S. Air Force announced one plane, an F-105 Thunderchief fighter-bomber fell in the attack and the pilot was missing. Radio Hanoi said seven planes were shot down.

In Washington, U.S. Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara told a press conference one aim was to make North Viet Nam's infiltration of South Viet Nam more costly; another was to save the lives of Americans and their allies fighting in South Viet Nam.

McNamara said there was aerial opposition outside Hanoi and one enemy MiG fighter plane was possibly destroyed. He reported an estimate of 80 per cent destruction of facilities in the Haiphong strike and heavy damage in the Hanoi area.

SMOKE RISES 35,000 FEET

A Saigon spokesman said smoke rose 35,000 feet from the fuel tanks near Hanoi and 20,000 feet from the Haiphong tanks.

A communique said the two fuel depots were vital to the support of "the mounting North Vietnamese aggression" against South Viet Nam, and the attack was "consistent with our continuing policy of bombing only military targets in North Viet Nam."

The previous closest attacks were on missile sites 15 miles from Hanoi and 10 miles from Haiphong.

HIT BRIDGES TOO

The spokesman said attacks Tuesday also destroyed two major bridges 27 miles northwest and 35 miles north of Hanoi. Both bridges are on supply lines linking with China.

The 38-tank storage area hit at Haiphong was said to have 72,000 metric tons of fuel, comprising 40 per cent of North Viet Nam's fuel capacity. The spokesman said 95 per cent of all the fuel going into the country moves through the depot.

Although the Hanoi target was three miles from the centre of the city, the spokesman said it was in the countryside with no sizable density of population around it.

It included 32 fuel storage tanks capable of holding 34,000 metric tons of fuel, or about 20 per cent of North Viet Nam's fuel storage capacity, he added.

The communique said:

"As compared with 1965 averages, truck movements from North to South Viet Nam during the first five months of 1966 hav doubled. Daily tonnages of supplies moved into the south have increased 150 per cent.

"Infiltration of men has increased 120 per cent. To maintain this sharply increased rate of infiltration, North Vietnamese oil imports so far this year are 50 to 70 per cent higher than in 1965."

Destruction of the Haiphong and Hanoi facilities "will make infiltration of men and supplies into South Viet Nam more costly and more difficult."

OTHER ACTION LIGHT

The air offensive in the North, now in its 16th month, completely dominated the U.S. command's daily war report. In South Viet Nam, where thousands of U.S. troops are in the field searching for the enemy, 'only very light and scattered, minor contacts" were reported.

U.K. Regrets Action

'NEGOTIATION PATH MUCH MORE DIFFICULT'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said today the bombing of North Viet Nam oil depots indicates a new stage in the war and "will make the road to the negotiating table that much more difficult."

"I think also it will bring about greater amounts of aid from the Soviet Union and Peking," the Montana senator told reporters who asked whether he approved the action.

Mansfield said the destruction of the petroleum facilities "will not deter infiltration" of North Vietnamese into South Viet Nam, although he said it may slow it for the time being.

He said he thinks the end result may be increased infiltration.

Chairman J. William Fulbright (Dem.—Ark.) of the Senate foreign relations committee said of the bombings: "I regret it because I think it will make more difficult negotiations for any kind of compromise settlement."

Fulbright declined to speculate as to whether the action might bring Communist China into the Vietnamese conflict, but said it was "a step in that direction."

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Wilson expressed regret over today's U.S. bombing of oil depots near Hanoi and said Britain is unable to support the action.

An announcement of the prime minister's view on the U.S. bombing of fuel targets three miles from Hanoi and two miles from the Port of Haiphong was made after Wilson had requested urgent clarification from Washington of reasons for the raids.

The White House in Washington declined comment on Wilson's statement.

"We have made it clear on many occasions that we cannot support an extension of the bombing to such areas," Wilson said.

DIFFICULT TO ASSESS

"Her Majesty's government have noted with regret that U.S. aircraft have attacked North Vietnamese targets touching on the populated areas of Hanoi and Haiphong. It is difficult for the British government, which is not involved in the fighting in Viet Nam, to assess the importance of any particular action which the U.S. government regards as militarily necessary in this conflict.

"Nevertheless, we have made it clear on many occasions that we cannot support an extension of the bombing in such areas, even though we were confident that the U.S. forces would take every precaution, as always, to avoid civilian casualties.

"We believe that the value of each application of force must be judged not merely in terms of the military need . . . but also in terms of the additional suffering and distress which it inflicts upon innocent people . . .

"The opportunity for bringing all the fighting in Viet Nam to an end is open to Hanoi and the onus for continuing it rests there also."

After publication of the prime minister's statement, the Speaker of the House of Commons refused to accept a question from left-wing Labor MP Michael Foot asking Wilson what protests he planned to make to Johnson over the bombing.

RUSSIA CHARGES:

'U.S. in Blind Rage At Own Helplessness'

MOSCOW (AP)—Moscow radio called the U.S. air raids near Hanoi and Haiphong today a "new dangerous step by the U.S. ruling circles in expanding aggression against the Vietnamese people."

"Contrary to all the lessons of history," it said on its domestic service, "the U.S. government is resorting to banditry and force in blind rage at the knowledge of its own helplessness.

"The latest act of international piracy . . . serves as an open challenge to all countries favoring the immediate cessation of U.S. aggression in Viet Nam. The world public has received with rage and disgust the news of Washington's latest senseless act which will further exacerbate international tension.

"Ties of fraternal friendship and militant solidarity link the Soviet and Vietnamese peoples. Our country and the other Socialist states are providing, and will continue to provide, the necessary aid in the just struggle of the Vietnamese people."

CARPENTERS SEND NOTICE FOR STRIKE

(See Page 18)

Strike notice expiring July 1 is being sent today to nearly 300 independent contractors in B.C. by the carpenters union.

The move follows an 87 per cent vote among about 3,000 carpenters favoring strike action.

About 270 contractors who bargain as one unit with another 3,500 carpenters have requested a government-supervised vote, now beginning to be taken.

A union spokesman said about 15 contractors in Victoria are affected. He declined to say whether, at the end of the holiday weekend, the carpenters will strike.

PROMINENT local sportsman Oliver Goldsmith was killed late Tuesday when the boom of a crane collapsed at Victoria Machinery Depot. He was working on the float of the crane which at the time was lifting a 45-ton section of the oil rig being built at VMD. (See Pages 14 and 21.)

GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE RECOMMENDED

Overhaul of CBC Structure Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC's programming authority should be moved closer to its production centres through the appointment of senior vice-presidents to be located in Montreal and Toronto network centres, the Commons broadcasting committee has recommended in a report tabled today.

The committee, reporting on hearings into the controversy over the network television program This Hour Has Seven Days, also recommended establishment of a grievance procedure to prevent future personnel troubles becoming public.

It called for a clearer definition of the "functions and authority" of the corporation's president who now is expected to be knowledgeable in public affairs, communications techniques and an able administrator.

A CBC spokesman said the corporation's board of directors is considering the committee report at a meeting in Ottawa but probably would have no comment at least until the meeting concludes Thursday.

The Seven Days squabble was triggered by the corporation's decision against using co-hosts Laurier LaPierre and Patrick Watson on the program next season.

A threatened strike over the issue was headed off when Prime Minister Pearson appointed Stuart Keate, publisher

Ottawa Dinner Guests Stunned

RUSSIAN SPARKS VERBAL SLUGFEST

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Ranking Soviet Deputy Dimitri Polyansky last night used Canada as the battleground to charge the United States with the sole responsibility for ending the war in Viet Nam.

Polyansky, the most senior Russian official to visit Canada, unleashed his broadside in a nose-to-nose confrontation with External Affairs Minister Paul Martin as the latter was bidding him farewell at the end of an official dinner party.

The scene was the venerable 100-year-old Rideau Club across from Parliament Hill where Polyansky had shaken Canadian parliamentarians with an attack against the United States in his after-dinner speech.

At the top of the stairs, with an interpreter wedged in between, he told Martin the United States had started the Viet Nam war and must end it.

"What is required is not mediation," he declared.

Polyansky had initially been operating from a prepared text.

SEES VICTIM

He told some 150 dinner guests on his last night in Ottawa that it was quite obvious who was the victim and the aggressor in Viet Nam.

"The United States entered another man's house," said Polyansky. "It was not Viet Nam which attacked the United States but the United States attacked Vietnamese cities, roads and villages, and poisoned their crops and destroyed their forests."

"Not one single Vietnamese bomb has killed or maimed one United States man, woman or child."

In remarks which were interspersed with uncertain boos from the Canadians, the Soviet deputy said all people everywhere must work to end the war so the Vietnamese people would have the chance to decide their own internal affairs.

SOVIET INSISTS:

We'll Never Accept Bonn Nuclear Force

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN

OTTAWA—The Soviet Union will never, under any circumstances, accept a West Germany armed with nuclear weapons, according to one of the leading spokesmen of the U.S.S.R.

In a hard-hitting speech that took Canadian officials by surprise, Soviet First Deputy Dimitri Polyansky said the apparent tranquility in Europe was concealing a far from happy situation.

"It appears tranquil," he told an official dinner hosted by External Affairs Minister Paul Martin.

"The soldiers are in their barracks and not in the trenches."

But he asked if this external peace was not "hiding gathering storm clouds."

The Soviet Union was not oversimplifying the situation in Western Europe, he said.

UNDER HITLER

"We are not trying to draw an equation between what is happening in West Germany today and what went on under Hitler."

But fact has decreed that there are now two states in Germany and the eastern portion is a socialist state seeking peace with all countries, Polyansky said.

Certain circles in West Germany were not happy with recent developments and opposed agreements made by anti-Hitler elements, he contended.

"The thirst for revenge is encouraging the government and some of the generals to

British Seamen Accept Strike Settlement Offer

LONDON (AP) — Britain's 45-day seamen's strike was settled today.

The executive of the National Seamen's Union voted 29 to 16 to call off the strike after meeting all morning at their south London headquarters.

The decision followed by less than 24 hours a charge in the House of Commons by Prime Minister Wilson that Communists were pressuring the seamen to prolong the dispute for political motives.

The vote of the union leadership indicated that a hard core of militants were still holding out for better terms but had been beaten down by the moderate element.

When the end of the strike was announced, there were angry demonstrations outside union headquarters.

"The initial reaction in shipping circles is one of relief," said a spokesman for the shipping federation.

The seamen went on strike for a 40-hour week.

ACCEPT FINAL OFFER

The shipowners' final offer of a cut in the working week to 48 hours—with 40 hours promised next year—was accepted along with 48 days annual vacation, four fewer days than the seamen now receive.

A spokesman for the union said the executive did not discuss Wilson's charges, although it must have been in the background.

"The whole discussion has been based on the present situation and the industrial dispute, together with the final offer," the union spokesman said.

The strike - ending resolution contained a formula to "adjourn strike action" for a year pending the report of a government court of inquiry into working conditions at sea.

The strike has tied up nearly 900 ships in British ports and 27,000 men have been idle.

The resolution said the executive had decided to accept the ship owners' latest offer "being aware of the great hardship caused to the citizens of the United Kingdom."

WASHINGTON—Talk about coals to Newcastle—would you believe teaching a sea lion to swim?

Dr. Clinton W. Gray, a Washington zoo veterinarian, and Mrs. Janet W. Davis, the zoo's hospital technician, did just that Tuesday. Teach "Loo-Seal" how to swim, that is.

Loo-Seal is a month-old sea lion who had never before been in water. Usually sea lion mamas teach the kiddies to swim, but Loo-Seal was taken from her mother shortly after birth to insure her survival.

Mrs. Davis took on the role of foster mother to Loo-Seal, feeding her plenty of milk and chopped smelt formula.

Then came the hard part.

Gray began Loo-Seal's lessons in the zoo's hippopotamus pool. He carefully carried the infant sea lion to the two-foot level and turned her loose. Loo-Seal frantically flippered her way back to shore.

Then Mrs. Davis stepped into the pool and held up a bottle of milk and some of that good old chopped smelt stuff about 15 feet from Loo-Seal.

Well, fans, that did it. Loo-Seal went the distance and now holds the sea lion's equivalent of a merit badge for beginning swimmers.

'YES-WOMEN NOT WANTED IN NUNNERY'

By DESMOND BILL

A Jesuit this morning criticized some aspects of Roman Catholic life in a way that many anti-Catholics would hesitate to do.

The speaker was Father Elliott MacGuigan of Toronto and he was talking to a meeting in Victoria of superiors of orders of Roman Catholic priests and sisters in Western Canada.

The Jesuit professor challenged the superiors to update their thinking and renew their community way of life.

Father MacGuigan said too many sisters identify their way of life with "false peace . . . nice people . . . yes-women . . . playing for safety . . . a cosy community life"

Such ideas are symptomatic of much that is wrong today in the life of religious communities, he said

★ ★ ★

But, he added, "religious life is often wrongly blamed for many weaknesses that should be blamed on individuals. The religious life only reveals the weaknesses in these people."

Too often, he said, the wrong sort of persons are accepted as candidates by religious communities. "We don't want the loners, the parasites who feed off the community instead of contributing to it.

"We don't need the jealous, the insecure, the gripers, the ones with no ability to work as a team.

"Cynics, politicians who play favoritism, the sad, the melancholic, those who, like Newman, wear their skin over their clothes" have no place in religious life and they should be screened out when they try to join, he said.

★ ★ ★

But religious life as it is lived in many communities today has many faults, said Father MacGuigan, and often these cause the loss of the most promising candidates.

When the good ones leave the tendency is to think, "Oh well, they never had a vocation anyway."

Not so, said Father MacGuigan. They are lost because they are frustrated by a way of life that reflects "excessive naievete, sentimentality about the past, and reluctance to admit there is anything wrong."

What is needed is "more hope, daring, trust, courage, willingness to take a risk and made mistakes. We need to jettison many ideas we have held for hundreds of years."

He described many communities of sisters as "suffocating with legislation" that restricts their way of life in trivial matters as well as important affairs.

Some older sisters resist change because they feel they "bore the burden and the heat" and they can't see why younger ones should have it easier.

★ ★ ★

There is a tendency to judge members of the community by the way they conform to rules. He asked, "Who are not coming into the religious life? Who are leaving it? Who are unhappy in it? It is the lovers and the thinkers. Do they suffer most in religious life?" Father MacGuigan said the answer to this question has vast implications about the need for change and its direction.

There is more to community life than "togetherness", said the Jesuit. "Togetherness will drive me up the wall."

The great need, he said, is to find a way in which religious communities can create "a family of adults. We need to protect the person in community life."

★ ★ ★

Father MacGuigan said younger religious these days "are off on a love kick" and are reacting against a way of life governed by excessive and unnecessary rules.

The challenge today is "how can we anchor and focus their love?"

He said that religious life has been badly damaged by "a warped, distorted spirituality of love and friendship" which has kept members of a community apart. He said the necessary corrective is the development of an attitude that would foster "warm, enduring, human friendship" among members. Without it, he warned, "you die on the vine."

The big question facing the religious today, he said, is "are we willing to join the human race?"

seek ways to acquire nuclear weapons."

The possibility of re-armament of West Germany was worrying some members of the NATO alliance, said Polyansky.

"We of the Soviet Union declare outright that we shall not reconcile ourselves to West Germany receiving nuclear weapons.

NEVER AGREE

"We will never agree to this under any circumstances or any conditions."

Polyansky said that the U.S.S.R. and Canada responded in different ways to the situation in Europe.

"But it is true that many years ago the Soviet Union said that a war was coming," he said.

In the western world this was termed Communist propaganda, but history has proved who was right."

The Warsaw Pact of Eastern European countries was formed as a reaction to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, said Polyansky.

GIVES PLEDGE

"That pact can be disbanded as soon as NATO is eliminated and we re-affirm that now."

The Soviet Union fully approved the prevention of further proliferation of nuclear weapons, he said.

The existing nuclear states had a sloemn obligation to refrain from using their power and the Soviet Union supported the abolition of underground nuclear testing and the establishment of denuclearized zones in the world.

Six flights of air force F-105 Thunderchiefs struck the petroleum storage area three miles across the Red River from the centre of Hanoi, using 750-pound bombs during the 25-minute attack, the U.S. spokesman said.

Four flights of navy jets from the 7th Fleet carriers Constellation and Ranger raided the oil facilities at Haiphong, two miles from the centre of the city.

The raid lasted eight minutes. A flight usually numbers about four aircraft.

Only Tuesday, the White House declined comment on reports circulating in Washington that President Johnson had cancelled air strikes against Hanoi and Haiphong in the last five days because of security leaks.

The Hanoi-Haiphong area is the heartland of North Viet Nam's small industrial area and its principal population centre. Hanoi has about 650,000 persons and Haiphong 370,000. Many women, children and elderly persons have been evacuated amid repeated predictions by President Ho Chi Minh's propagandists that the two cities would be attacked.

of diplomacy to the breaking point, delivered a brief but emphatic reply that Canada was best able to judge the "enormous contribution" of the U.S. to world welfare and its efforts in recent years to resist aggression around the globe.

As the closest neighbor to the United States, Canada understands better than anyone American basic purposes "which are no less intense than our own—that is to promote peace in the world among all countries," said Martin.

As the Rideau Club buzzed with reaction, the external affairs minister shook hands with Polyansky and wished him good night and good luck on what had so far been described as a happy, fun-loving visit.

Polyansky, however, displayed the candor prevailing throughout the evening and carried on his discussion of the United States in a close crowd of politicians and newsmen.

The conversation went like this.

COOLED OFF

Polyansky said his country had begun to develop good relations with Washington but these had cooled off as a result of the "barbarous" American activities in Viet Nam.

The United States had lost much because of the war and the "cooling off" of Soviet-American relations was no secret to either country or other nations, he said.

Martin returned, almost before the interpreter was finished translating, that the United States was dedicated to freedom for all peoples and was "anxious to use its resources and power for the freedom and good of mankind."

"Do you believe the war on Viet Nam is for the good of mankind," Polyacsky shot back.

"No war is good," replied Martin, adding that it was incumbent on every nation to make the United Nations strong so that peace might be realized. realized.

POWERFUL

Polyansky agreed that the United Nations should be a powerful organization.

Martin again reminded him that Canada was in position to understand the United States better than anyone.

"We have our difference but we always respect the national purpose of the United States and what they are trying to do to promote harmonious relations in the rest of the world," he said.

"And we also are working towards this end."

Said Polyansky: "Does this mean you support the war in Viet Nam?"

Without ruffling, Martin replied that he had spent an hour earlier in the day telling the Russian delegation about Canadian efforts to seek means for a negotiated settlement and his hopes that they would not go unfulfilled.

CAN END IT

"The United States was the belligerant and they could end the war at any time they wish," countered Polyansky.

Martin replied that the U.S. had offered North Viet Nam peace negotiations without any pre-conditions and interested countries were working toward that end.

"The United States activities in this way are just a theatrical performance," said Polyansky.

And it was at this point that Martin pulled in his rope and advised his visitor that the most fruitful way to persue the discussion was along the private lines they discussed earlier in the day, and not for public consumption.

"It's all over," he smiled raising his glass.

But the Russian deputy pressed one more point.

"What is required is not mediation," he said, "but it is necessary for those who started the war to put an end to it."

Martin said he was not going to get into the debate again about who started what.

"When you see the peaceful prairies you'll have a different attitude," he quipped, shaking hands for the last time.

"I would like to find a common language with you," said Polyansky.

And one interested observer, Agriculture Minister Joe Greene remarked:

"You have just seen the best thing since Clay and Liston."

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Skies cleared in many areas overnight and temperatures dropped sharply. Frost was reported from the Cariboo and the 43 degrees recorded at Vancouver was the lowest ever for June 29. Conditions appear to be taking a turn for the better as pressures continue to rise over the Pacific. However, there will still be enough moisture in the air to produce a few showers along the coast and thunderstorms in the interior both today and Thursday.

BY U.K. COMMUNISTS

McCARTHYITE TAG PINNED ON WILSON

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP)—The Communists today made the most of the publicity glare provided by Prime Minister Wilson's charge that they are trying to seize control of the seamen's union.

The Morning Star, formerly The Daily Worker, came out with headlines accusing Wilson of a shoddy smear and "a cock-and-bull McCarthyite rigamarole."

The newspaper says unionists will no' bow down to Wilson's decisions "just because he is prime minister."

Communist leaders, named by Wilson Tuesday in the seaman's affair, gave out statements right and left and appeared on numerous television and radio programs to give their own views on the prime minister's charges.

But the man named by Wilson as the Communists' central figure in the union "takeover bid" was "definitely unavailable" to the press to give an extended report on his own background, a Communist party spokesman said.

RAMELSON

SAYS UKRAINE-BORN

National newspapers ran Bert Ramelson's photograph describing him variously as 54, 55 an 56 years of age. Some still maintained he was Canadian-born, though the curly-haired Communist party national industrial organizer told reporters Tuesday he was born in the Ukraine and went to Canada with his emigrant parents at the age of "12 or 13."

Described by one highly-respected newspaper as the "whiz kid" of the Communist party, Ramelson still speaks with a strong East European accent.

He has been in Britain since 1939.

His father was a fur dealer who came from the little Ukrainian community of Cherkassi. They settled in Edmonton where young Bert showed brilliant scholarship. He got a law degree from the University of Alberta and what he describes as the chief justice's gold medal.

Admitted to the Alberta bar, he later joined the International Brigade in the Spanish Civil War in 1937, became adjutant of a machine-gun battalion and by his own report was wounded twice.

By then he had formed strong sympathy for communism, decided he had had enough of Canada and settled in Britain, in the Yorkshire industrial city of Leeds; in 1939. There he married Marian Jessop, daughter of a politician who later became mayor. Marian took an active part in the British Communist movement.

During the Second World War he joined the British army, was captured at Tobruk and was held prisoner for some months in Italy before he escaped, wandered for a while among Italian peasants and finally made his way back to the British forces. He later was commissioned in the Royal Artillery and became a staff captain, working on the army's legal side in India.

When he was demobilized, Ramelson began an active political career as a Communist.

FLOPS IN ELECTIONS

In 1949 he was a member of the Jewish-Ex-servicemen's Association; the Shopworkers' Union delegate to the Leeds Trades Council and a Communist candidate in elections. He flopped in both local and national elections.

In 1954 he was reported to have replaced his wife on the party's national executive. In 1956 he accompanied Party Secretary John Gollan on a trip to Moscow described as a month-long holiday.

Wilson said Ramelson had three full-time officials as his staff and they made the docks their hunting ground.

Ramelson said he had nothing to hide but that since the Wilson accusations he has been looking over his shoulder when he walks down the street.

He said he lives in the suburban middle-class community of Sydenham on the south side of the Thames. The Ramelsons have no children.

NAMED commander in chief of Allied forces in Central Europe was West German Gen. J. A. Graf Kielmansegg who replaces Gen. J. A. E. Crepin of France. French officers are being withdrawn from Allied commands July 1.

No Answer From PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson tartly refused Tuesday to say whether Canada would vote for the admission of Communist China to the United Nations later this year.

Conservative Leader Diefenbaker twice posed the question point-blank during the Commons question period. He said the inference in a weekend Toronto speech by Mr. Pearson was that China must be admitted.

Mr. Pearson said there was no reference to the admission of China to the UN. The Liberal leader said he talked about the indispensability of having China attend disarmament conferences.

ALL BUT FRANCE UNITED ON ASIA

SEATO to Meet Red Challenge

CANBERRA (Reuters) — The Southeast Asia Treaty Organization council, describing the situation in the treaty area as "the most dangerous in the world," tonight said efforts to meet the Communist challenge must not fail.

The declaration was contained in a communique issued at the end of the ministerial council's annual three-day meeting here.

In another development, U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk was reported to have said Cambodia has asked Britain and Russia for support in strengthening the International Control Commission's work on the South Viet Nam-Cambodia border.

Rus ktold a closed session of the council he had learned that Cambodian's head of state, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, wrote letters to Britain and Russia as co-chairmen of the Geneva conference on Indochina, a SEATO spokesman said.

He said Cambodia wanted ICC responsibilities to be particularly carried out on the South Viet Nam-Cambodia border because of constant allegations that Viet Cong guerrillas were escaping into Cambodia when pursued by Allied forces.

In its communique, the council said Communist aggression and efforts at subversion remained a major threat to the peace and security of Southeast Asia.

The communique was signed by seven of the eight treaty members — the United States, Britain, Thailand, the Philippines, Pakistan, New Zealand and Australia. France, represented by an observer, did not sign.

Nader Starts New Crusade —Prevent Pipeline Blasts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Auto critic Ralph Nader has set out on a new crusade: To call attention to the "hazard" he claims is posed by the 360,000 miles of gasoline, oil and natural gas pipelines in the U.S.

"The construction, inspection and maintenance of pipelines is too often a zero sum game between costs and safety," Nader said Tuesday as he accused the industry of taking inadequate measures to guard against explosions.

And government watchfulness over pipeline safety "is shockingly small," he added.

"Population expansion increases risk exposure in what were formerly rural areas with the lowest pipeline safety standards," he told the Washington chapter of the American Society of Safety Engineers.

SPARKED CAR PROBE

Nader's persistent criticism of auto safety standards was instrumental in congressional investigation of the industry and proposed legislation to set federal standards.

By "the admission" of the natural gas industry itself, the author said, there has been one natural gas pipeline failure on the average of every five days since 1950.

And yet 24 states have no safety codes for natural gas pipelines and of the 26 that do, only California "has drafted regulations in mandatory language."

The 25 others, he said "are faithful" to the industry "format of recommending, not mandating."

Nader cited "a tragic forerunner of what may be expected if rigorous corrective action and upgrading of existing standards are not undertaken."

BLAST KILLED 17

This was the explosion March 4, 1965, in Natchitoches, La., of a gas pipeline owned by Tennessee Gas Transmission Co., since renamed Tenneco Inc. The fact that the pipeline ruptured early in the morning, he said, "prevented a larger disaster than the 17 people who were incinerated in their homes."

Danger, Nader said, is posed by excessively thin pipe, as low as 1-10th of an inch, poor welding, insufficient depth of installation and inadequate inspection.

"Pipeline deterioation, particularly through the inroads of corrosion, is alarming experts in this field," he added.

Nader quoted from a report by the U.S. Federal Power Commission last April that "the maximum credible single accident possibility" for a failure of an interstate natural gas pipeline "is high, possibly higher than that for railroad, motor car or air transportation."

The Changing Role

AT THE RECENT BRUSSELS meeting of NATO ministers, Mr. Paul Martin voiced strong confidence in the future of the organization. He did this despite the withdrawal of France from the military structure of the group and the consequent disruption of the deployment of defence forces.

The greatest strength of NATO, since its creation seventeen years ago, has lain in the Soviet threat of aggression. The greater the threat, the greater the unity and determination of the NATO members. Conversely, the chief factor in any deterioration of the mutual defence alliance must be a reduction of the Russian threat and a consequent disappearance of the need for the arrangement.

Mr. Martin appears to have referred only to the military aspect of NATO in his remarks, and the implication is that he believes a Soviet threat of aggression against Europe will continue for an indefinite time into the future. This may well be basically true. A world without NATO might have been a very different world from the one we have today. But there can be little doubt that, whether due to NATO or not, the climate between Russia and the West has improved immeasurably in the past few years.

This new relationship between East and West has partly resulted from the presence of nuclear armaments, which, while vastly increasing the lethal possibilities of a war, at the same time decrease the likelihood of a major war occurring. Mutual annihilation is not a feasible foreign policy for any nation.

There are other factors in this warming of the international climate. The rise and the potential of Red China have, even at this early stage, exerted great influence on the postures of both East and West. The natural evolution of the people of Russia, who seek greater freedoms and a larger share of consumer goods, has lessened the differences between peoples. A growing interplay of visitors and of trade has added its encouraging effects.

Thus the original concept of NATO as a bristling fortress continually on the alert for a Soviet lunge has largely dissipated. If the organization is to survive to render the valuable services of which it is capable, it must change its nature and its functions to meet the changing requirements of today and tomorrow.

The new objective will not be so much to defend members as to inculcate peace; not so much to stand on guard against Russia as to open the way for communication, interchange, co-operation. This will be a much more positive achievement, and should be a more fruitful one.

To Encourage Canadian Investors

IN OTTAWA THIS WEEK FEDeral and provincial representatives along with a number of top private business advisers are meeting to discuss the Canadian securities business — an exploratory step toward laying down a uniform system for regulating and administering trade in stocks and bonds.

The importance of this meeting cannot be over-rated. Even though it is not a policy meeting, the recommendations which come out of it could go far to transform the Canadian economic system by encouraging a larger flow of the country's savings into the venture capital market. It could be the beginnings of a system of "people's capitalism" along the lines which have contributed to the development of the United States as the strongest economic power in the world.

There is nothing remarkable about the reluctance of many Canadians to put their savings into enterprises designed to develop the country and produce new wealth. A confusion of federal and provincial laws and regulatory bodies, some good and some bad, has resulted in too many opportunities for the "sharp" promoters who have taken advantage of the unsophisticated investor. Some economists and analysts believe that lack of public confidence in equity investments has been an important factor in Canada's gaining the reputation of being a nation of timid savers rather than bold investors in new enterprise.

What is needed is a new deal for the Canadian investor so that when he puts his savings into enterprises designed to develop the country and produce new wealth he will know that he is getting an even break. This requires new and tough laws on disclosure of corporate information right from the time a company is formed and capital is raised. It requires an end to special advantages for the "insiders," those who have access to news about companies ahead of the small shareholders and who can use this information for their own profit.

Canadian experience has proved, as it was proved in the United States years ago, that self-regulation of the investment industry will not work because of constant conflicts of interest. Strong government regulation must be provided and it must be applied in a uniform manner across the country. This will be a difficult problem due to the jealous way in which several provinces guard their constitutional responsibility in the field. But it should not be impossible for the experts meeting in Ottawa to work out a new system which can be applied to the whole country and which would guarantee for Canadians with funds to invest in new enterprises the protection to which they are entitled.

The next step will be to sell the plan to the politicians and that can be done only if the public demonstrates its desire for a thoroughgoing reform of the whole field of regulation and administration of the securities business to bring it into line with the needs of Canada in the modern world.

Three Years of Reform Talk

AFTER THREE DAYS OF DEliberations in Frankfurt last week, representatives of the ten leading financial powers once again failed to come up with any solution to the problem of world monetary reform. The delegates, in fact, were unable even to finish a report expressing their differences on the subject.

The only agreement reached was that there are two main blocks to monetary reform — France's opposition to change and the increasing United States balance of payments deficit resulting from the Viet Nam war. The group meets again next week and some optimism has been expressed that at least it will be possible to complete a report on the subject for presentation to the finance ministers of the 10 powers at the end of July.

At the ministers' meeting a decision must be taken on whether to go forward with the second phase of discussions, bringing together at the bargaining table a number of smaller nations which would be vitally affected by international monetary reform — or the lack of it — since they are pinched by the lack of credit for financing their trade.

The ten major powers have been discussing reform for almost three years now and are little closer to a decision than they were at the start. The countries outside the inner circle can hardly be blamed if they become impatient at the failure to reach agreement even on the need for a new means of settling accounts between trading nations. Their hostility cannot help but be aroused, either, if the decision to admit more countries to the negotiating table is a negative one.

China's Continuous Convulsion

OCCASIONALLY, in a roil of thunder, a stab of lightning vividly illuminates the strange night-landscape. For an instant figures are seen to be locked in mortal combat, while others, wounded, sink to their knees, and otherwise to fight again. Then darkness covers all once more. That really is not an excessively dramatic description of the way the professional China-watchers see the present situation in mainland China, through their admittedly unsatisfactory telescopes.

Alsop

To begin with, even the briefest convulsion involving China is a drama on a world scale; and Mao Tse-tung's once monolithic China now appears to be in a state of continuous convulsion.

Puzzling Aspect

The fact that the convulsion still goes on is really its most puzzling aspect. It was not at all surprising that old Mao Tse-tung's obviously failing health touched off a succession struggle, even before the state funeral. It was not at all surprising, either, that the first move was made by the Chinese element which hankers for pragmatic, common-sense Communism.

It was not surprising, either, that these wicked "modern revisionists" were counter-attacked, with apparent success, by the hard-nosed group led by Teng Hsiao-ping and the army boss, Marshal Lin Piao. But when the "modern revisionists" were publicly driven from their stronghold in the Peking city government, that should have been the end of it.

Instead, the most unexpected people have gone right on fighting back in the most unprecedented manner. Take the president of Nanking University, Kuang Ya-ming. He started in the party propaganda department, held two other university presidencies before being promoted to Nanking. In short, he is an ambitious careerist.

Attack on Professors

Some of the Nanking professors were to be cashiered for revisionist and bourgeois leanings. According to the provincial radio, president Kuang therefore held "an enlarged meeting" of the party apparatus in the university, which he "tried to hoodwink" by "manipulation." Following this meeting on June 2, he proclaimed on June 3 that "the situation for a counterattack was excellent." A "six-hour coup d'etat had been smashed," he said, and he ordered the revisionist professors to be reinstated.

After that the sinister Kuang got his comeuppance from the provincial party committee, who summarily removed him from the Nanking presidency. The same pattern, of attempted resistance followed by disciplinary action, has appeared in a good many other reported incidents in other provinces. The striking feature of them all, of course, is not the eventual disciplinary action; it is, rather, the resistance that is still maintained at this unlikely stage of the game.

There are other symptoms that the internal struggle is by no means over, although Teng Hsiao-ping's group so obviously has the upper hand for the moment. For example, the official People's Daily was supposed to have been brought into line after an obstinate tussle (when quotations from the thought of Mao replaced the weather report!). But once again, nowadays, the China-watchers are finding very marked differences of emphasis between the party newspaper and the far more strident army newspaper, Liberation Daily. From countless signs of this sort, nine out of 10 of the best analysts, in government and out, have concluded that the issue in China is still in doubt.

Last Gasp

There are two things to be said about this. In the first place, such wise analysts as Professor Lucian Pyd of M.I.T. have always foreseen a super-Maoist interlude, as a sort of last gasp of the old order, before the Chinese people managed to reshape the Communist system to suit their own needs, habits and talents. We may now be seeing the uncertain beginnings of this interlude.

In the second place, however, after the catastrophe of "the great leap" had been tidied up, no analyst of any pretensions ever foresaw the sort of thing that is now going on, prior to the death of Father Mao. But long before the state funeral, with Mao at least able to serve as a figurehead, the ferment burst out wholly prematurely. And even after the seemingly successful hard-liner's counterattack, the ferment still goes on.

Influence of War

All the analysts agree that these strong symptoms of trouble and division inside China make any kind of Chinese intervention in the Vietnamese war even less likely than it used to be — and it was always unlikely. That is important, of course. But the long-range meaning of the Chinese ferment is even more important.

For the short run, anything can happen, even something as lunatic as a renewed attempt at a "great leap." But for the long run, this degree of ferment at this time means that the internal forces demanding great changes in Mao's China are so strong that they are almost bound to prove irresistible in the end. And if that reading is correct, what is happening is indeed dramatic.

New Methods

Toronto Daily Star

THE current epidemic of labor unrest that is sweeping the country is making one point quite clear. The old tactics of pounding tables and forming picket lines are no longer effective in reaching quick and satisfactory settlements.

As automation becomes a greater fact of life, labor and management have to devise new methods of dealing with a whole new set of problems. Government, caught in the cross-fire, has to exercise some leadership in getting both parties to accept new attitudes.

Mr. Justice Samuel Freedman foresaw this need last year as he studied the controversy over the CNR's proposal to move from the steam engine to the diesel age by having crews and equipment run over longer distances.

He cautioned management not to introduce automation and other major changes abruptly and unilaterally; rather they should be subject to negotiation between management and labor. It should be a matter of social conscience on the part of any business or industry going into the field of automation that some of the resulting gains and savings should be applied to helping those workers who have been displaced. At the same time, organized labor must not stubbornly reject inevitable change.

Eye to Eye

As the eye specialist involved and the subject of some comments in Mr. Art Stott's column of June 25, I would like to make a reply.

On the day he visited my offfice, I had seen a person with acute glaucoma in both eyes. This person had no appointment yet took a great deal of time. While Mr. Stott spent the evening with his pipe and slippers, composing the article, I was in the operating room for two hours with this woman. She is doing well and will retain her sight.

To compare this type of work to a dentist's or a restaurant shows some lack of insight. Mr. Stott can always buy a new set of choppers or cook his own food.

I give every patient the best attention that I can, for everyone is regarded as possibly having some lethal or blinding disease, until such has been excluded. As every person is different, I cannot work with my eye on the clock, or predict the time needed. I know Mr. Stott's time is valuable but I am sure he values his eyes at more than an hour's working time.

If this work was simply a matter of fitting glasses, it could be done to a time limit, in fact glasses can be obtained with no delay and no appointment, from the counter girl in a downtown department store.

My office staff do the best they can to run an efficient appointment system and they are under constant pressure to squeeze another one in sooner. Many unexpected extra patients have to be accepted at the last moment because their symptoms sound ominous. A dentist can refuse to see a patient, for a night's toothache can be eased by tablets, but overnight damage to an eye may be beyond repair, so I dare not refuse to see anyone who seriously asks for aid.

I shall continue to do the best that I can for my patients and I trust my staff are working to the same end.

Mr. Stott knows who I am, and as I am bound by the ethical rules of my profession to abstain from advertisement, I must end this letter with— Ophthalmologist.

Take It From Abraham

If Abby did not have her tongue in her cheek, when she described the letter from "A Believer," giving all that rubbish about Sarah the wife of Abraham, having lost "not three but seven husbands on the first night of her marriages," etc., as a "beautiful letter," may I suggest that she should study the Bible a little closer, especially the 11th and 23rd chapters of Genesis, giving details of Abraham's life, and see for herself what ridiculous twaddle "A Believer" wrote.

I really think she must have been pulling Abby's leg, or Abby her's, in accepting it and endorsing it. Abby's column is usually so very sane, and generally correct.—E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful.

'Wrong-Way' Again on Decimals

THE current ruckus over the three-month-old decision to decimalize Britain's currency in 1971 is demonstrating once again that if there is a wrong way of doing something then James Callaghan, chancellor of the exchequer, can almost certainly be counted upon to find it.

Dewey

The supreme custodian of the country's purse strings originally laid a tentative claim to the title of Wrong-Way Callaghan with the Labor government's first major budget, a gruesomely long and complicated document that was later hacked to bits by the opposition.

That claim has since been fortified by a series of stop-gap mini-budgets and fortified yet again, in decisive fashion, by that recent marvel of unselective muddle, the selective employment tax.

Business Split

Now, with one half of the business community at odds with the other half over decimalization, Mr. Callaghan's title is surely beyond dispute. Having pondered the merits of two possible decimal systems—having pondered, indeed, to the point where it became indecent to ponder any longer—the chancellor's unerring instinct led him to choose what is almost certainly the wrong one.

Ever since 1963 it has been accepted that decimalization of British currency would involve adopting either the so-called pound-cent system, with the present pound as the basic unit, or the 10-shillings-cent system, using half the value of the pound as the basic unit. It was then that the Halsbury committee, after an 18-month study, table its famous split report in which four of the committee's six members favored the pound and the remaining two held out for the smaller unit.

Behind the split lay what the committee took to be a conflict between domestic and international factors. To begin with, it was generally accepted that the 10-shilling unit was greatly preferable to the pound in nearly every respect.

Smaller Unit Advantage

With the pound now valued at roughly $3 Canadian, the 10-shilling unit would obviously correspond more closely to the basic currency units of the various countries that have adopted or are intending to adopt the dollar system.

For purely domestic purposes, moreover, there is no comparison between the two units. The hundredth part of a pound is equivalent to three Canadian cents, which is too large a sum to serve as the smallest unit of exchange. Thus the pound-cent-½ system would entail the use of half-pennies and thereby sacrifice much of the simplicity of the decimal system. A final consideration is that the 10-shilling system would be much less costly to introduce.

On the other hand, the Halsbury committee had before it strong representations on behalf of London's international banking and financial community to the effect that eliminating the dear old pound would have "grave consequences" for sterling as an international exchange currency.

These interests admitted that foreign attachment to the pound may be irrational—what's in a name, after all? But they maintained that the attachment was real none the less and that it was, in these days of balance of payments difficulties, of extreme importance to Britain.

So far as the majority of the committee was concerned, it was this international argument which tipped the balance in favor of the pound.

And it was the international argument, as passed along by the committee, which finally led Mr. Callaghan to announce last March that when Britain goes decimal five years hence it will adopt the pound-cent-½ system. As it has turned out, however, this was one coin the chancellor should have bitten.

No Basis in Fact

He would have discovered, for example, that the famous international case has no basis in demonstrable fact. The idea that abandoning the pound would have serious adverse effects on sterling was merely a supposition that has never been checked out either by the financial community, by the committee or by anyone else. The truth is that to this day no one has the foggiest notion about how the world would react to a new currency unit.

Worse, the committee compounded the error of overestimating the case for the pound by underestimating the case against it. Just as it accepted the financial community's "evidence" on faith, so it accepted the scanty representations that had been made in favor of the 10-shilling system as being the true measure of its support throughout the entire domestic business community.

Homework Undone

The result of the committee's failure to do its homework properly, and of Mr. Callaghan's failure to do his own homework properly, has been a first-class fiasco. While financial interests continue to hold out for the pound, the domestic sector of the economy has come down heavily in favor of the 10-shilling unit — including among others the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, the Retail Credit Federation, the Consumer's Council, the Brewers' Society, the nationalized transport industries, the vending machine people and even some banks which had earlier supported the pound.

Indeed, so convinced are the supporters of the 10-shilling system that Mr. Callaghan has made a bad blunder that they have now launched what amounts to a campaign to persuade him to change his mind. So far, the chancellor is sticking to his guns, imploring his critics to accept his decision and to stop confusing the issue. In the meantime, the confused and unhappy British businessman is left to envy the Australians, South Africans and others who merely decided to decimalize their currency and then went ahead and did it.

Looking Back

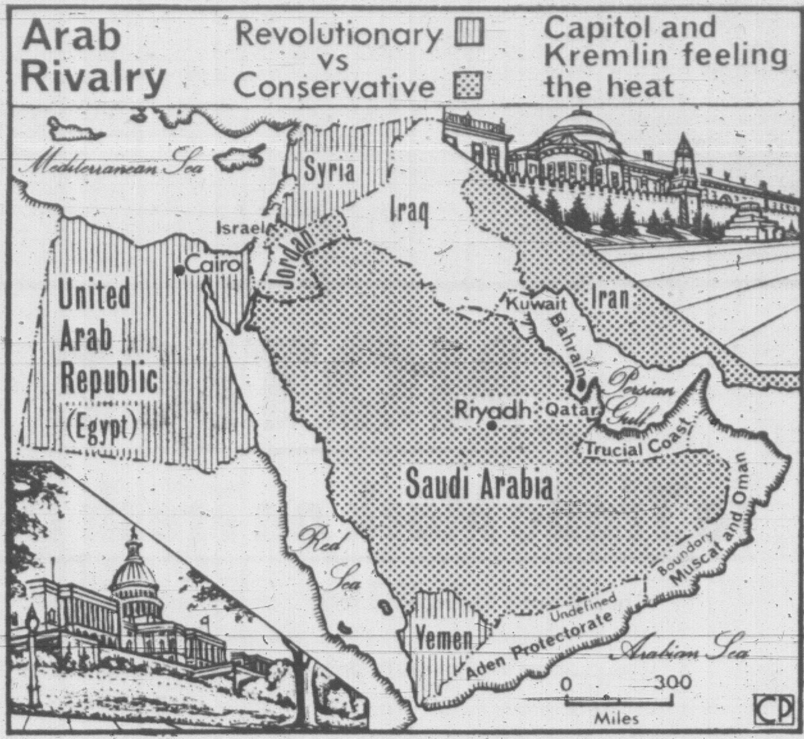
From the Times of June 29, 1906:

Recognition of the new municipality of Oak Bay by proclamation has now been officially made. First elections are to take place early next month and the council will meet soon after that. The agitation for incorporation arose when Saanich proposed to organize itself as such. Residents of Oak Bay felt they did not want to ally themselves with a municipality of Saanich as the interests of the one district were different from those of the other.

Arab World Turmoil Ahead As Nasser and Feisal Clash

Rivalries in the Arab world focus on President Nasser of Egypt and King Feisal of Saudi Arabia. A Canadian Press reporter who visited the Middle East finds current tension reminiscent of the situation a decade ago when the area was in turmoil for three years. This is the first of two articles.

By CARL MOLLINS



Rivalry for the Arab mind between Feisal of Saudi Arabia is shaking down the Middle East into revolutionary and conservative camps. The two blocks have been fighting in Yemen where Egypt backs the Republicans and Saudi Arabia supports the Royalists. Moscow is backing Nasser with arms and moral support; Washington has pledged defence of Saudi Arabia in case of attack.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Signs of impending crisis abound in the Arab world like telltale eddies of dust before a desert sandstorm.

On a six-week tour through seven Arab territories early this summer, tiny cups of velvet Turkish coffee and jars of sweet, clear tea lubricated talk of abrasive rivalries and sour relations in the Middle East.

Antagonism between Egypt's Gamal Abdel Nasser and King Feisal of Saudi Arabia disturbs the careful coexistence of the last few years. Arms are flowing into the area from East and West.

Criticism

Feisal's campaign for a revival of pure Islamic principles throughout the Moslem world implies criticism of Nasser's socialism and explicitly rejects dealings with Communists. Nasser replies that Feisal is a feudalistic front man for another imperialist plot against the Arabs.

The Nasser and Feisal philosophies collide most sharply in the Arabian peninsula itself — today in Yemen, tomorrow no doubt in Aden and the next day perhaps among the oil sheikhdoms of the Persian Gulf.

In Yemen, 70,000 Egyptian troops have been fighting for the Republican cause against Saudi-backed Royalists for most of four years.

In Aden, Feisal-style leaders of the South Arabian Federation speak darkly of a Nasserite scheme to pounce from neighboring Yemen — after the British leave Aden in 1968 — as the first step in a plot to pick off the Persian Gulf sheikhdoms.

Across the Gulf of Aden in Djibouti, the French talk philosophically of powerful Soviet and Egyptian influence in neighboring Somalia and predict their own departure from French Somaliland under pressure in five or six years.

Tension Felt

The tension is palpable in places — among the riflemen on the streets of Aden; talking to a Yemen army officer in Jeddah; in a cheering Egyptian crowd that hails Nasser's threat to attack Saudi cities; among Aden revolutionaries in their Cairo headquarters; even hearing the restrained suggestion of Feisal that Egypt has no business in the Arabian peninsula.

But the quarrel has repercussions elsewhere. Other Middle East governments are being drawn into the dispute — some reluctantly, others eagerly. Behind them the big powers grope among the subtleties of shifting Arab alignments.

The fervent young Baath socialists who seized power in Syria last February have joined in the polemics against Feisal They are actively promoting a "revolutionary front" in concert with Egypt, Algeria and Iraq against Saudi Arabia's "imperialist and reactionary" conspiracy.

Diversion

The move to confront Feisal is motivated in part by domestic difficulties in the four "front" countries. An external threat may divert attention from their precarious economies and political instability.

Whatever the motive, the result could calm quarrels between Egypt and Syria, Egypt and Algeria, Syria and Iraq. The Middle East would be left divided between conservative and radical blocs.

The Russians, engaged on what one Canadian envoy in the area called "a quiet but effective diplomatic offensive," have declared for the revolutionaries.

Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin gave Nasser at least moral support during his visit to Egypt in May. Soviet arms are flowing to Egypt, Syria, Iraq, Republican Yemen, Somalia and the Palestine Liberation Army. Syria is getting much Soviet economic aid and has permitted Khaled Bakfash, the Middle East's top Communist, to return from exile.

The Russian activity is said to be intended in part to keep out the Chinese — once busy in Syria, Yemen and Somalia. But Western diplomats are edgy.

The Americans and the British are hesitant about siding wholeheartedly with Feisal, although both governments wear the pro-Saudi label as far as most Arabs are concerned.

Feisal is buying $450,000,000 worth of arms from the West, including British planes, radar and communications systems and U.S. Hawk anti-aircraft missiles.

The United States has placed Egypt on what one described as "a short rein" by making food aid harder to get. When Nasser threatened to attack the Saudi bases of Yemen royalists, the U.S. state department issued a statement of support for Feisal.

Feisal's late-June meeting with President Johnson balances Kosygin's trip to Cairo.

All this disarray in the Arab League has done nothing to relieve the chronic Arab-Israeli tension.

More Incidents

Armed incidents along the Israel armistice line have been more frequent. In May Egypt attempted unsuccessfully to put a stop to flights along the Sinai frontier by RCAF planes of the United Nations Emergency Force, after reports of a build-up by both Israeli and Egyptian forces in the area.

In fact, allegations of a Saudi-linked "imperialist conspiracy" have been tied in with "Zionist plots." The reasoning here was expressed by a Lebanese politician: the West is using its own arms shipments to Saudi Arabia as an excuse to provide Israel with a balancing supply, he said.

Experienced Arab and Western observers here have remarked that current discord in the Middle East is reminiscent of tensions 10 years ago, tensions that kept the area in turmoil for three years.

Suez Clash

A decade ago, the tensions led to the Suez clash of 1956; the abortive "Eisenhower Doctrine" of 1957 that tried to set up Saudi Arabia as a counter-weight to Egypt; a threatened Communist takeover in Syria, the overthrow of Iraq's royal government and civil strife in Lebanon that brought U.S. Marines to Beirut and sent British paratroops to Jordan in 1958.

Few experts expect history to repeat itself precisely. As one Arab journalist remarked with a wry smile: "Surely everybody involved—including Nasser, Britain and the United States—is wiser from experience."

Nevertheless, politicians and diplomats in their air-conditioned offices forecast that this summer in the Middle East will be long and stifling, with storms a possibility.

Tomorrow: Feisal's pan-Islam policies stir shock waves in Middle East.

RUMANIA BOOSTING THE ANTE

By VICTOR ZORZA
The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — Some of the reasons for the new coolness between China and Rumania can be found in the speeches which greeted Chou En-lai, the Chinese prime minister, on arrival in Albania.

The conclusion of his Rumanian visit was not graced by a joint communique. The official news agencies of the two countries instead put out a "statement" to the effect that the two sides had "expressed their points of view" during a useful exchange of opinions, which lead to greater understanding between them.

There is no mention of any identity or even similarity of views of the topics discussed.

Chou was several hours late for his final public rally in Rumania, evidently because the Rumania hosts sought to prevent him from making the usual fire-eating anti-Soviet speech. The speech he did deliver was brief and off-the-cuff, which is most unusual on such occasions.

The Chinese have evidently judged it best not to alienate the Rumanians any further. But the bitterness with which they regard Rumania's "diplomatic" efforts toward joint Chinese-Soviet action to help North Viet Nam is suggested by the speech the Albanian prime minister, Mehmet Shehu, made in welcoming his Chinese ally.

The Albanian Communists, he said, would never be deceived by "acrobatic politicians" who were trying to bring about "common action with the Khrushchevite revisionists."

Neutral Mask

He further indicated who the unidentified politicians might be when he said they had tried, "under the mask of neutrality," to cause Albania to stop open polemics against the Soviet Union — which is the course of action the Rumanian have publicly urged on both sides in the Sino-Soviet dispute.

There were some, he said, who claimed to be neutral in this struggle, but such neutrality only worked in favor of the "revisionists." The time had now come for every Communist party to take full responsibility for its attitude — that is, presumably, to take a clear stand.

The Rumanian press has published friendly commentaries on the Chinese visit, but has not given any ground on the political issues. The Rumanians have thus shown that they could balance their recent objections to Soviet domination over the Warsaw Pact with resistance to Chinese political pressures.

This demonstration of independence has raised the political price that both Russia and China would have to pay in future for anything they may want from Rumania.

East Berliners head for home along Karl Marx Allee, the city's principal thoroughfare. Although it appears they have no love for communism they're applying their talents and resourcefulness to make the economy work.

A Young East Berliner Speaks About Communism

During a visit to East Berlin, Canadian Press reporter John Best talked about life under communism with an unusually outspoken East German. His frank views are related in this story.

By JOHN BEST

EAST BERLIN — He was born before the war but was too young to take part in it.

As a lad he experienced the full Wagnerian horror of the Berlin siege and can give you a running account of the battle between Nazi and Soviet troops.

Now he's a married man, reasonably content, well-educated and with a good income by East German standards. He also has decidedly undoctrinaire views on just about every aspect of the German and Berlin problems.

He apparently doesn't believe in communism — certainly not for Germany — but he's not notably anti-Communist either. More than anything he seems to be a realist and pragmatist.

If he's not necessarily an average East Berliner, he is at least a well-informed one, and a person with definite opinions of his own.

Gunter (not his real name) doesn't believe what the East government says about the Berlin Wall. The regime tries to spread the view that the wall was necessary to stop "provocations" from West Berlin, to halt currency speculation and other types of illegal trans-border actions.

Gunter sees the wall as people in the West see it: a device for preventing East Germans from running away. Even government officials privately admits the truth of this.

No Choice

"Let's face it," one official told me. "It was a question of closing the border or handing this country over to the West Germans."

In the 15 years preceding the erection of the wall in 1961, about 3,000,000 persons fled the Communist sector.

At the same time, Gunter, the realist, thinks the wall was necessary so that East Germany could begin "closing the gap between it and booming West Germany.

This statement seemed to hint at a curious contradiction in the collective attitude of East Germans to the system under which they are forced to live.

Although they have no love for the system — and the government recognized this by building the wall — they are, consciously or otherwise, applying their talents and their resourcefulness to make it work.

Certainly as Communist countries go, things are well-organized in the East German zone. The people probably live better than in most other Communist states — though conditions still can't compare with West Germany.

Close Ties

East Germany's economy is healthy — again by Communist standards — though closely tied to that of the Soviet Union. The emphasis has been on building up heavy industry.

The government is engaged in what appears to be a campaign to make more convincing East Germany's claim to be an independent nation, with East Berlin as its capital.

In different parts of the city new office buildings are being erected to accommodate government departments located until now in makeshift quarters.

The idea appears to be aimed at making East Germany look more like an established concern and less like a temporary phenomenon.

Gunter is rather proud of the success East Germany has achieved in economic reconstruction.

"You just can't imagine how hard it was in those early post-war years," he says with feeling.

No Grudge

He holds no grudge against the Russians for stripping East Germany of most of its industry, forcing it to start from scratch, while the Western Allies actually helped West Germany rebuild its economy.

His attitude is that since Germany lost the war it had to face the consequences.

But he does resent the imposition of what he considers an alien system on the country. It may or may not have been good for other East European countries, he says, but it was not suited to an advanced economy like Germany's.

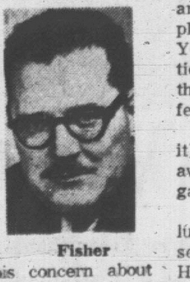
He implies that the gap between the western and eastern sectors would be much narrower if East Germany weren't held back by communism.

He has a vague fear that reunification of Germany, should it come, would mean commercial domination of his part of the country by the West Germans.

But ask him point-blank whether he feels Germany should be reunified and he answers with a quiet but firm "yes."

Parliament's on the Move As MPs Fret Over Image

By DOUGLAS FISHER



Fisher

OTTAWA — Parliament has been such a loser since 1962 that concern for it and doubts of themselves — individually, collectively, and about their leadership—became so general and sharp among MPs that it was really worse than among the public. Everyone, even the veteran idolators of Parliament like Gordon Churchill and Stanley Knowles, has been worrying about the image of Parliament and its future efficacy. The range of remedies suggested has been immense.

No one has discarded his concern about Parliament. But there's a difference. A prowl around the lobbies, chats with the party House leaders, a look at the items seized and/or passed, and, particularly, a scanning of debates and committee records demonstrates that this Parliament is on the move—ahead. Almost every MP I meet insists that this is a good team, i.e. the House as a whole.

No. Partisanship hasn't disappeared. There is both internal and other party grumbling over the abilities of the party leaders. Also there is a gingerliness about the smooth pace of the past weeks. No one knows better than MPs that today or tomorrow the place could blow up—figuratively speaking. Most heartening of all, there's a tendency to appraise recent reform in procedure and committee work as interim matters, a workable base from which Parliament can reform further.

* * *

The quality of debate is up a little in my opinion. I've no measuring stick but speeches tend to be shorter and there is more attention to detail on clauses of bills as they move through. One senses that everyone is trying desperately to behave, to be constructive and co-operative.

Slowly, some good humor is permeating the chivying interjections. There have been some dandy speeches on complicated topics like the Canada Assistance Plan, the Bankruptcy Act, the correlation of various plans with the Canada pension system.

Some of the new MPs like Lewis Brand (PC—Saskatoon), David MacDonald (PC—Prince), John Reid (L—Kenora-Rainy River), Grace MacInnes (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) are solid performers. Even among a lot of platitudinous waffling on the Company of Young Canadians were some excellent practical suggestions and a modicum of idealism that is out of the House character of the past few years.

Best of all (it's hopeless to try to document it) more than a dozen committees are churning away at estimates, at bills, at general investigations.

New committee chairmen like Joe Macaluso (transport), Richard Cashin (industry, research), Grant Deachman (fisheries), Harry Harley (drug costs and prices) and Eugene Whelan (agriculture) are getting both an esprit de corps and a core of informed MPs.

* * *

The House leader, George McIlraith, says nice things about the spirit of co-operation. I gather that the caucus meetings of the three large parties have had a regular theme. It is: "Let's accomplish something" and has run steadily above the usual tactical concerns over the other guys and what they're up to.

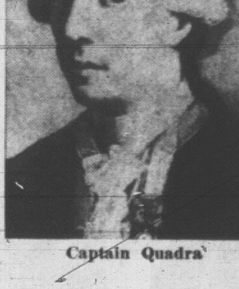
I have a hunch that several factors, not implicit in the House concern over image, are helping. Each major party has a number of men planning leadership campaigns and jockeying. This makes each of them somewhat introspective and constructive. Secondly, the shock of Prince Edward Island and especially of the Quebec election has nudged up more carefulness about the divisive French-English issue and made a federal election seem an even more dreaded prospect.

Thirdly, the two Liberal conferences—the Prairie one in August, the national one later—and the Tory meeting in November have become the aiming points for party policy differentiation (as well as strolls across the leadership stage).

Don't swear by it. Don't count on it. But the short-range prospect is for a quiet summer and an effective parliamentary session.

Don't give credit to anyone yet, except to the burgeoning sense around the House that it has the potential to be a winner.

Founders Of B.C.



Captain Quadra

The Spanish explorer Don Juan Francisco de la Bodega y Quadra's fame suffered at the hands of the English. He and Captain George Vancouver had agreed to commemorate their friendship by giving their names jointly to some headland or island.

They chose the island that brought them together and named it Quadra and Vancouver's Island and maps recorded it that way until the middle of the 19th century when common usage reduced the name to its present form. Quadra's name remains on a tiny island near Campbell River and on a Victoria Street.

Born of noble parents in 1743 in Lima, Peru, Quadra was second-in-command of an expedition to the Gulf of Alaska in 1775. After other Spanish captains seized Nootka in 1789 and came to the brink of war with England, Quadra was given charge of the Nootka negotiations.

Capt. George Vancouver, sent out to accept restitution, was wined and dined by Quadra. But the Spaniard was reluctant to abide by the treaty his country had signed, relinquishing its claims. In the course of their negotiations, Vancouver and Quadra, although unable to talk without interpreters, became fast friends. It was 1794 before the Spaniards finally returned control of the island to the English.

JAMES' BOYS GAVE 'ALL WE HAD'

Harry James wants to come back to Victoria.

"It's marvelous," the trumpeter said today—just before he and his 22-piece band took off by private bus for Seattle.

"We had a really wonderful reception from your sailors, soldiers and airmen. They just shouted for more and we gave them all we had."

The Harry James band gave two concerts in the old gym at the Canadian Forces base at Esquimalt and the total attendance exceeded 1,400 — about 750 on Monday night, 650 on Tuesday.

The audience screamed for the old favorites Harry James made famous during the warring 40s — Sleepy Lagoon and You Made Me Love You — and the golden-toned trumpet was as magnificent as ever.

of the Vancouver Sun, to act as informal mediator.

Before the committee the co-hosts and other producers argued that management was ignorant of programming and that lines of communication were complicated and not working.

Management replied that the Seven Days producers were belligerent, continuously defying management and wanted to set up a corporation within the corporation.

The 3,700-word report based on evidence from 11 witnesses and several written briefs said the "malaise" in the corporation revolves around four major factors:

1. Absence of a grievance procedure to deal with internal conflicts in the production field.

2. Difficulty in reconciling the views of creative production personnel with those of management.

3. Problems arising from the distribution and exercise of authority at various levels of management.

4. CBC policy about public affairs programs.

The committee said improved, constant communications between management and the production level can best be attained if there are senior vice-presidents responsible for programming and production in the English and French networks respectively.

SHOULD BE IMMEDIATE

These appointments should be made immediately and the men concentrate on news and public affairs.

"They should report directly to the president and the board with whom the ultimate responsibility should rest for the overall CBC operation."

The committee said a grievance procedure should be set up in the English network similar to one which has worked "with remarkably good results" in settling troubles within the French network since it was established following a 1959 producers' strike.

Occasional disputes are inevitable when producing radio or television programs on controversial issues, and they will spill into public unless dealt with rapidly and effectively.

"For instance, it was stated in evidence, that under an oral agreement of two years' standing no changes in artists and performers on a program would be effected without consultation with the producer concerned.

"This agreement appears to have been ignored in the case of Seven Days."

The committee said tensions are natural when creative talent associates with a managerial staff and the question is "not how one can eliminate all tensions but how the negative, destructive kind can be eliminated and the creative tensions retained."

No final program policy can be laid down and "those who would like to run a radio or TV network in a military fashion" would be very disappointed with the results."

COMPROMISE NECESSARY

Close and constant communication and compromise on the part of all parties is essential.

It said "extreme nervousness or jumpiness" by management over public reactions to programs and touchiness or irritability on the part of creative personnel "spell the very formula of disaster."

It said the fact it is almost impossible to assign responsibility for any breakdown in the system indicates that the degree of authority at each level in the corporation is not well defined.

There should be more opportunities for younger, more dynamic persons to reach top management and "the present failure to achieve this goal, indicates a certain amount of sclerosis has crept in."

The present definition of the president's functions is unfair to anyone holding the office.

"He is expected to be at the same time versed in all aspects of culture, political and social evolution; aware of all the latest developments in communication techniques as well as an able administrator capable of supervising the management of a budget that exceeds $100,000,000."

Canada Rapped On China Trade

By WILLIAM J. MACKIE

OTTAWA — Canada should be cut off from trading with the United States because she is trading with the enemies of the U.S., former vice-president Richard M. Nixon said bluntly during an interview in Chicago.

"Any country which chooses to trade with an enemy of the United States should not be allowed to trade with the U.S.," said Mr. Nixon, listing such nations as Canada and Great Britain.

The report of his hard hitting comments made following a speech he delivered denouncing the American foreign policy in respect to the Vietnamese war and published in the Chicago Tribune last Sunday.

"Resistance to aggression in Viet Nam is an absolute necessity," said Mr. Nixon. "A defeat or retreat in Viet Nam would mean that communism would engulf Southeast Asia.

"But the U.S. has been committed to the wrong kind of war there. A five or 10-year ground war can only serve the aggressors, the communists," he said. He warned that a protracted ground war in Asia has more chance of spreading into a world conflcit than a decisive short-term encounter that would be concluded before Red China has developed its capability of delivering an atomic warhead on a distant target.

Mr. Nixon said the Johnson administration should work to get allies to stop trading with North Viet Nam and then American air power should be used for strategic bombing of military targets to cripple Hanoi's ability to wage war.

This could be accomplished by using foreign aid funds as "a diplomatic lever," refusing to give any to those nations who continue to trade with North Viet Nam, Cuba and Red China, he said.

Mr. Nixon said a "bring the boys home from Viet Nam" trend is developing in the U.S., "not because the people are opposed to what we are doing in Viet Nam, but because of a truth gap."

He said: "Viet Nam has proven to be a massive failure in American foreign policy. We are fighting there with no help from our allies except Australia, New Zealand and South Korea.

"What we need now is preventive medicine for the future so that when the next commusist aggression comes, as it surely will and as it did in the Dominican Republic and in Viet Nam, the U.S. will not be standing alone in defense of the free world while its allies refuse to commit troops to the conflict and in fact continue to trade with the enemy."

He called on the U.S. to embark on a "crash program" to overhaul its global defense alliances so that it will never again find itself singe-handedly fighting communist aggression.

POSSIBLE BY YEAR 2000

When Canada Spaceman?

TORONTO (CP) — A Montreal space researcher said Tuesday Canada could put a man in space before the year 2000.

But the country has no space policy and is missing many opportunities for that reason, said Dr. Gerald Bull, director of McGill University's Space Research Institute.

He said Canada "can do a tremendous amount . . . with the type of budget we can afford. We could have a space project that would include a man in space. I don't think it would bankrupt the government. . ."

"We are not talking about $7,000,000,000 a year — perhaps something in the order of $500,000,000."

Dr. Bull said in an interview space research could give Canada:

— An Arctic radio-television satellite system that would give reliable radio and television reception to the Far North;

— A navigation-type satellite that could examine precisely the geography and mineralogy of the country;

— A communications satellite that could transmit mail from coast to coast in half an hour.

Dr. Bull heads the high altitude research program (HARP).

Canada has shared the costs of the HARP project with the United States Army for the last two years, but recently decided that the current fiscal year would be the last in which it would help pay HARP's bill.

HARP makes use of obsolete naval guns to launch payloads into space. The eventual goal is to place a payload into orbit.

FOUR KILLED

Damaged Tanker Rocked by Blast

NEW YORK (UPI) — Four men were killed and eight injured Tuesday when a series of explosions rocked the Alva Cape, the ill-fated British tanker anchored in New York since its disastrous collision with another ship 12 days ago.

Victims of the blast were salvage workers helping to unload a cargo of highly volatile naphtha.

Besides the injured, the Coast Guard said three men were missing.

TANKER A MENACE

Mayor John Lindsay, who flew over the stricken ship in a police helicopter five times, said he would order the Alva Cape out of New York Harbor. He said if the owners did not comply, he would ask the Coast Guard to declare the tanker a menace to navigation.

"We can't leave it in the harbor with all that naphtha aboard," Lindsay said. "We've been trying to get it out for quite awhile and couldn't."

The explosions occurred as a Coast Guard hearing was being held into the June 16 collision between the Alva Cape and the American tanker Texaco Massachusetts, which claimed 33 lives. The hearing was expected to resume today.

VICTIMS OF FIRE

The explosions struck at midafternoon and sent a thick blanket of smoke over the ship. Those who were not killed or injured by the blasts were the victims of the fire touched off by explosions.

Fire officials and Coast Guard sea and air rescue craft rushed to the ship's aid and prevented a worse tragedy by squelching the fire and guiding the injured to safety.

By evening, as steam still hissed from the hold of the ship, the Alva Cape listed six degrees to starboard as she rode at anchor.

Union Agent 'Encouraged' Disturbances

VANCOUVER (CP)—William Clement, personnel manager of Lenkurt Electric Co., testified in Supreme Court that former electrical workers' union business agent Art O'Keefe mingled with strikers during disturbances at the Lenkhurt plant and encouraged them to demonstrate.

Mr. Clement was giving evidence at the hearing of 29 persons charged with contempt following the disturbances May 11-13 which followed a wildcat strike at the Lenkurt plant.

"O'Keefe was mingling with the group and patting them on the back," Mr. Clement said.

The 29 are charged with ignoring two Supreme Court injunctions banning demonstrations at the plant in adjoining Burnaby municipality.

The hearing continues.

Security, Not Pay Raise Said Labor's Top Concern

MONTREAL (CP) — Automation, dislodging men often beyond the age of re-training, is the greatest single factor in North American labor unrest, John Turner, federal minister without portfolio, said here Tuesday.

"Anxiety over job security and fear of unemployment is the prime cause of industrial dispute in North America today—not wages or working conditions," he told the St. George Kiwanis Club.

The Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George member of Parliament said the bargaining table, where contracts are hashed out, is obsolete. He warned against premature government involvement in a strike, which "destroys the basis of free collective bargaining."

With reference to so-called illegal strikes, he said:

"Strikes cannot be settled just by passing a law. No law is going to compel a man to work if he feels he is being unjustly treated."

Mr. Turner said recent strikes have demonstrated how vital transportation is to the national economy. A proposed national transportation policy would see established a single transportation board, assuming the functions of the current board of transport commissioners, the air transport board and the Canadian maritime commission.

The new board would also have jurisdiction over inter-provincial trucking.

He also said he would like to see Parliament get full live television coverage. He proposed a special channel for the broadcasts, in the high frequency range.

VICTORIA NOT DIRTY, MAYOR TELLS CHAMBER

Victoria's streets would be cleaner if the public used litter baskets more frequently says Mayor A. W. Toone.

Answering criticism from the Victoria Chamber of Commerce regarding untidy streets, the mayor said he felt Victoria was reasonably clean.

"We have a 15-man crew—14 men and a foreman—working steadily at the task," he said. "It would appear to me that our streets are fairly clean. There is room for improvement it is true and maybe the Chamber of Commerce can help us in this.

"If we can educate the public to use litter baskets and take a pride in their city things could improve."

The mayor noted that the downtown area is swept every night between midnight and 8 a.m. while other streets have less frequent cleaning schedules.

Go-It-Alone Library More Costly—Toone

Oak Bay might find it more costly than it thinks to establish its own library.

Mayor A. W. Toone, commenting on a proposal made by Oak Bay Coun. Frances Elford, said Tuesday any municipality setting up its own library would eventually pay more than it would if it joined the regional library system.

Coun. Elford, in a written brief presented to Oak Bay council Monday night, suggested the municipality take a close look at the final draft of the library agreement before attaching an official signature.

CHEAPER

She further suggested that Oak Bay could establish its own library for between $35,000 and $40,000 a year.

Oak Bay pays $73,000 a year to use the Victoria library facilities.

Cound. Elford said the balance of the money could be used to purchase reference material "to augment the reference department in Victoria."

Mayor Toone said he was reluctant to comment on what appeared to be an internal matter for Oak Bay council.

"But I do think that Victoria has gone a long way to try and work out a library agreement which would be beneficial to the area as a whole," he said.

"The final draft of the agreement, worked out between the other reeves and myself, will be going out today. I think it comes as close as we possibly can to conforming with the recommendations of the experts."

EXORBITANT

Coun. Elford termed the fees to be paid by other municipalities as "exorbitant" and urged Oak Bay council to seek alternative methods of financing a library.

"There is no doubt in my mind that any municipality deciding to separate will find that its library costs will be much greater," Mayor Toone said.

HOME GARDEN

Rose Has Followers But Iris Well Liked

By HILDA BEASTALL

The title Queen of the Flowers is variously bestowed on the rose, chrysanthemum, rhododendrom, gladiolus or iris accordinghto the specializing group on enthusiasts concerned. The delphinium, Day-lily, and African-violet are also contenders for the crown.

Hilda

As an extensive genus of wide variation in habit, the iris has plenty of followers, though locally it is likely that the tall German, or bearded, iris is most widely grown.

Few plants have the charm, grace and color of these irises, for their heights range from the dwarfs (pumila irises) of three or four inches to the giants reaching to five feet or more, when grown with a little shade.

BEARDED PARTS

While the bearded section of the iris genus is accommodating, there are a few basics to be provided.

A garden soil predominantly gravelly, drying-out in summer and draining in winter, with practically full sun all day, provides the essentials for fine blooms.

One of the finest iris gardens I have known locally was situated in an open sunny area on a hill where tall Douglas firs cast dappled shade for part of the summer afternoons.

The range of colors now available in these irises is truly remarkable. From the blues and yellows of 60 years ago have come every shade and tone imaginable, with the pinks and reds improving each year.

The straight sword-like leaves are essentially part of the graceful iris picture, for they commence growing in earliest spring and remain as an attractive feature until late summer.

BLOSSOM CUT

Some of the early varieties of these irises have now finished their flowering, and need to have the blossom stem cut off. The leaves should remain as long as possible.

A decision must be reached as to whether lifting and division of the roots (known as rhizomes in this iris) is needed.

This attention is necessary just about every three years, for during that time, new rhizomes crowd the old ones, and poor flowering will breome apparent.

How to divide and replant these irises will be dealt with in a later column.

Victoria Man To Judge PNE Dog Show

A feature of the 1966 Pacific National Exhibition will be the three championship dog show and obedience trials.

To be held in the Forum, the dog show will be presented August 20, 22 and 23, and the obedience trials will be held August 24.

The PNE will feature a salute to the B.C. Centenary with a Centennial Jamboree. It runs from August 20 to September 5.

The dog show is expected to draw entries from throughout the Pacific Northwest and from other parts of Canada and the United States.

Judges will be R. A. Cross of Victoria; William Semple of Regina; Vincent Perry of Conoga Park, California, and O. C. Harriman of Pebble Beach, California.

Judge of the obedience trials will be Miss Joy Curran of Vancouver.

Junior handling classes for youngsters will be held on August 22 and 23. Judge of this event will be Mrs. Elsie Murray of Vancouver.

HEARING URGED

Committee Split On Campsite Plan

Saanich lands and planning committee recommended Tuesday night that public hearings be called into applications for a trailer campsite and a pet burial park.

Earlier, council referred the trailer campsite to the committee and decided against the animal cemetery.

Chairman Coun. William Campbell had to cast the deciding vote after a 2-2 tie on a motion for a public hearing on the campsite, at the northewest corner of Sayward and Lochside.

"I am totally and unalterably opposed to this use on this site," said Reeve Hugh Curtis.

"It would be folly to permit this use in an area destined to be residential."

He was supported by Coun. Digby Kier but Couns. Leslie Passmore and William Noel disagreed.

PREDICTS REJECTION

However, Coun. Passmore said while he disagrees, a public hearing "will be a waste of time" because it would be rejected.

The committee was told the planned campsite would only be used for four months in the summer for tourists. Trailers would be limited to 20 feet in length with no more than 40 on the 4.6-acre site.

On the pet burial park, applicant G. J. Thompson, 4987 Old West Saanich Road, said it would be no nuisance, inconvenience or embarrassment to anyone.

He believed animals should be disposed of in a hygienic manner. The cemetery would be situated on part of five acres of wooded property.

"NO HARM"

"I see no harm," said Coun. Noel. "A lot of pet lovers think more of their dogs than their mothers-in-law."

The committee will recommend to council that the previous motion rejecting the application be rescinded and the application reconsidered.

Another rezoning application turned down by council also got a recommended "no action" from the committee.

Mrs. M. C. Jaques, 5087 Del Monte Avenue, sought reconsideration of an application for boarding kennel and dog breeding.

Committee members stood by council's earlier objections to this use in a good residential district.

NDP Plans Picnic

The annual picnic of the New Democratic Party on southern Vancouver Island will be held Sunday, July 24, at Sea Bluff Farm on Witty's Lagoon Road. Picnic runs from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.

U.S. FIRM TO SURVEY CONVENTIONS

Victoria's convention centre committee agreed Tuesday to hire the Portland firm of Lund, McCutcheon and McBride to start a survey of convention needs in the city.

The Portland firm, one of two bidding for the job, will start its survey in about three weeks and have its report ready six weeks after the survey starts.

It will advise on the size of convention centre the city needs, the design and location of the building and how to attract more conventions to the city.

City council has earmarked $3,000 for the survey.

TAYLOR . . . meanwhile, back at the ranch

GARBO WAS HEAVY

Robert Taylor Back Not Quite So Skinny

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Robert Taylor is back making a movie at MGM.

That should evoke a rush of memories for the movie buff. All those wondrous old films: Camille, Waterloo Bridge, Broadway Melody, Johnny Eager, A Yank at Oxford, etc.

And what about these titles: Wicked Woman, Society Doctor, Gorgeous Hussy, Her Cardboard Lover, Times Square Lady, etc., etc.?

All these films and many more were made by Taylor during the longest contract ever fulfilled by a Hollywood star. He signed with MGM in 1934 when he was Spangler Arlington Brough, just out of Pomona College. His exclusive contract ended in 1958, but he remained until 1961 on a non-exclusive basis.

Now he's back playing in a western, Return of the Gunfighter.

At 54, Taylor's face is a bit more seamed, but his figure remains a trim 175. The famous Taylor hairline, widow's peak and all, is the same as ever.

"I was skinny as a rail back in my early days here," he recalled. "I think I weighed 150 pounds when I made Camille. I had to sweep Garbo into my arms and carry her and I almost didn't make it. Those petticoats she was wearing must have weighed 50 pounds."

Whereas he started his career as a romantic leading man, Taylor has specialized in westerns in recent years. He did his stint in television with his Detectives series, which lasted three years. Now he prefers to stick to features.

"I just want to make enough money to pay my bills," he said. "That usually amounts to a couple of pictures a year. And I try not to plan them during the fishing season."

Fishing is almost another profession for Taylor. Luckily his wife, the German beauty Ursula Theiss, shares his love of angling. The couple and their two children spend vacations on the Colorado River, where they keep a cabin cruiser.

"That's where we're heading as soon as this picture is over," he said.

FESTIVAL OPENS TONIGHT BUT BALLET EYED

There's No Doubt About Main Event

By TOM CARNEY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Showing giant flowers on the patio and record advance sales in the box office, the ninth annual Vancouver Festival opens tonight with the Vancouver Opera Association's production of Hansel and Gretel.

The month-long festival will include the complete Bolshoi Ballet as well as musicals, concerts and films.

Flowers 10 feet high have been placed on the patio of the 2,800-seat, $6,000,000 Queen Elizabeth Theatre for opening night. Free candy and food will be distributed and the audience may dance in the lobby following the opera.

Premier W. A. C. Bennett and festival president R. A. C. Douglas, a city lawyer, will officially open the festival.

The Bolshoi Ballet, making its Canadian debut, will be the festival's smash hit. The Soviet company presents Swan Lake July 19 and 20, Don Quixote July 21-22, ballet highlights July 23 and Giselle July 24.

BOLSHOI BIG DRAW

A festival spokesman said advance sales up until Tuesday totalled $197,000 with Bolshoi performances accounting for $110,731.

Not counting the featured Bolshoi performances and the 1965 feature, the Royal Ballet, advance sales for the 1966 festival are still $59,000 ahead of the 1965 figure, $36,000 ahead of the comparable figure for 1964 and $44,000 ahead of 1963.

The 1966 festival, with an over-all budget of $475,000, is managed by Vancouver impresario Hugh Pickett, who replaced William Crawford III, general manager and artistic director who quit last year in a dispute over budget funds.

Other highlights of the 1966 festival include:

—Big Soft Nellie, a play by Henry Livings, produced by the Playhouse Theatre Company and directed by Malcolm Black, July 1-9;

—Oliver, starring Jules Munshin, freely adapted from Dickens' Oliver Twist by Lionel Bart and produced by the Vancouver Festival Society, July 9-16;

—The Threepenny Opera, written by Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill, produced by the Playhouse Theatre Company, July 13-31;

—John Ogdon, famed pianist, accompanied by the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra conducted by Meredith Davies, July 27-28;

—An evening of National Film Board productions, a selection of award winning films, July 25;

—Mireille Lagrace, an organ recital, July 7.

Wage Fight Patched Up, Opera on

MONTREAL (CP) — Verdi's Rigoletto was performed at Place des Arts Tuesday night after settlement of a wage dispute between the touring Teatro Regio di Parma and impresario Sam Olan.

The agreement is described as only a stop-gap measure to solve the payment dispute which resulted in the cancellation of Monday night's performance.

Dr. Giuseppe Negri, director of the company, said Monday the troupe had been advanced only $6,000 of $57,000 owed.

Mr. Olan said enough money was being held by the Montreal Trust Company to pay the performers in full and "all they had to do to get paid was to complete all their appearances as scheduled."

He said the new agreement provides that performers will be paid every day until the end of their stay in Montreal. Mr. Olan said he had lost some $100,000 because expenses were higher than expected.

JOHNSON OFFERS AID

Meanwhile, a personal representative of Premier Johnson said Tuesday the government is prepared to absorb part of the deficit—now well in excess of $100,000—if the promoters default on further payments.

The justice department said an investigation launched into the conflict early Tuesday likely would be suspended. The investigation turned up no evidence of fraud.

Plane Kills Youth

TAXARKANA, Ark. (AP)—A 14-year-old boy was killed Tuesday when hit in the back by a low-flying airplane. Jimmie Dwayne Sims was hit by a wheel of a crop-dusting plane.

Party Founder Dies

ISTANBUL (Reuters) — Fuat Koprulu, former Turkish foreign minister and one of the founders of the country's Democrat party, died here Tuesday at 76. It was while he was foreign minister that Turkey entered the Atlantic Alliance.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Dynasty Bounces Back from '66 Low

Dynasty gained 25 cents to $10.25 shortly before noon on the mining section of the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Earlier it had touched a 1966 low of $9.25. Norgold rose four to a 1966 high of 32 cents.

Brenda put on 30 cents to $8. New Cronin was off half a cent to a new low of 21½ cents.

In the oils Fort St. John was down 10 to a low of 75 cents.

AT TORONTO Norgold traded 511,800 shares and gained 4 cents to its 1966 high of 33½ cents to highlight moderate dealings.

In the main list, Massey-Ferguson dropped ¾ to 33½ and CPR ⅝ to 63¼. MacLean-Hunter and Distillers Seagram fell ½ each to 35½ and 33¾.

In senior base metals, Denison lost ½ to 54, Inco ⅜ to 95¼ and Noranda ⅛ to 52⅝.

Hudson's Bay Oil was ahead ⅜ to 18⅝ and Pacific Petroleum ¼ to 12 in a stronger Western oils group.

AT NEW YORK volume for the day was estimated at 5,900,000 shares, compared with 6,280,000 Tuesday.

Despite the size of the losses by the averages, one broker said reaction was not severe to U.S. bombing of oil installations near Hanoi and Haiphong. He pointed out that the decline came on low trading volume.

Sperry Rand, down about half a point, looked like the most active stock of the day.

Aircrafts, electronics and airlines were off sharply: Douglas, actively traded, lost more than 2 points. General Dynamics and Boeing were down a point or more.

Zenith declined a point and Raytheon fell about half a point.

American Telephone lost nearly a point and Du Pont was down more than a point.

Eastman Kodak and General Electric fell about 2 points.

Among Canadian issues, Dome Mines was up ⅝, McIntyre Porcupine ½. Alcan and Canadian Pacific were down ⅝, Distillers Seagrams and International Nickel ⅛.

IN MONTREAL banks continued to move to higher levels but most other sections were narrowly lower in light trading.

Industrial volume was 36,900 and mines and oils 243,600.

Utilities were down. CPR slid ⅜ to 63⅝ and Calgary Power ¼ to 26.

Papers continued a downward trend, with Consolidated easing ¼ to 38½ and Domtar ⅛ to 18.

Among the banks Montreal advanced ⅛ to 59.

Senior metals were down. In the base section Noranda eased ⅛ to 52¾. Among the primary issues Alcan dipped ⅜ to 38⅜ and Algoma ⅛ to 27.

Senior oils were lower, with B-A and Imperial each dropping ¼ to 32⅛ and 54¼ respectively.

Among the speculative mines and oils Cessland and Jubilee each fell 5 cents to $4.35 and $1.77 respectively.

IN LONDON the market opened cautiously but the news that the steel nationalization bill will be published Friday brought a slightly firmer tone in equities, with steels and companies with steel interests showing improvements.

Gilts were idle and only occasionally harder.

Dollar stocks were narrowly irregular, with small losses outnumbering small gains. Canadian Pacific lost another 1½ points and most other Canadians eased by around one point. British-American Oil and Consolidated Paper were a shade harder, however.

Canadian banks recovered Tuesday's small losses.

Home banks were steady and insurances went ahead.

Oils were quiet. Minings were dull.

Exchange President

WINNIPEG (CP)—Joe Edwin (Ted) McCannel of Ottawa has been appointed president of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, the exchange's board of governors announced today. He will take the position in September, succeeding James W. Clarke.

Canada Oil Expert Leads Hunt

PORT ELIZABETH (AP)—A Canadian drilling expert will direct South Africa's first big attempt to find oil.

Edward Radu, 39, from Calgary, is drilling superintendent of a large oil rig being erected near the small town of Murraysburg, 210 miles northwest of here in the dusty, barren Karoo region.

The oil search is a vital project for South Africa in its attempts to make itself self-sufficient and immune from possible international boycotts. Opponents of the country's apartheid (race segregation) policies have many times called for international sanctions, and oil is South Africa's Achille's heel.

Comparatively small amounts of oil are produced locally from coal but the country is heavily dependent on overseas supplies which could be stopped in the same way that supplies to neighboring Rhodesia have been blocked by the British-led embargo.

Radu came to South Africa from Libyan oilfields to control drilling at the Murraysburg rig for the government - sponsored South African Oil Exploration Corp. (Soekor).

He will head a team of seven Canadians and about 60 local non-white laborers in round-the-clock drilling operations.

The 13-storey-high rig, weighing more than 1,000 tons, is described as one of the biggest in the world.

Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd and top government officials are expected to watch drilling begin June 29. Geologists believe prospects for finding oil in the Karoo are "favorable".

The rig is on the farm of Oscar Smuts but if the drillers strike oil he will not share in the profits. In South Africa's Cape Province, where the oil search is centred, mineral rights are vested in the state.

The Cape Town newspaper Die Burger, which has sources close to the government, says chances of finding oil in the offshore area known as Agulhas Bank are much better than in the Karoo. The Agulhas Bank lies off the southern tip of the African continent.

Several international oil companies have approached Soekor seeking concession rights for 60,000 square miles, or about one-third of the Agulhas Bank.

Chairman G. S. J. Kuschke said exploration work will begin next year.

NEW YORK (CP)—The Canadian dollar was down 1/32 at 92 63/64 in terms of U.S. funds. Pound sterling up 9/16 at $7.79 7/64.

MONTREAL (CP) — The U.S. dollar was down 1/32 at $1.07 17/32 in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Montreal reported near noon today. Sterling up ¼ at $8.00¼.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Late session trading expanded on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today, with an aggressive demand in rye and barley.

Barley was traded in substantial quantities, with aggressive buying by processors and shippers.

Flax and rapeseed were also active, with rapeseed rallying after Chicago soybeans moved higher. Sales of flax included 500 tons to Europe.

Rye prices were up, with indications of overseas interests involved in the buying.

Oats was less active and limited mainly to domestic trade.

U.S. extension of the war in Viet Nam was attributed for the buying on the Winnipeg and U.S. markets, with the end of the British seamen's strike also affecting the Winnipeg market.

CHICAGO (AP)—Prices moved up briskly on all commodities in the grain futures market today after an unsteady start and by early afternoon July soybeans were ahead more than 9 cents a bushel.

Brokers said the demand apparently included a revival of speculative support all along the line. Wheat moved up about 5 cents, the extreme from early lows after prices were believed to have run into an accumulation of resting orders to reinstate long positions.

Reports from the southwest and Kansas said the expected increased movement of the grain into commercial channels on the recent setback had not materialized.

Retailers Want Advertising Curbs

CALGARY (CP) — The Retail Merchants Association of Canada called for stronger federal laws against fraudulent advertising Tuesday and said control should be given to federal combines investigation officials.

The association's annual convention passed a resolution saying the Combines Investigation Act should be changed to give its director powers similar to those of the U.S. Federal Trade Commission.

It said false advertising "is often discovered in the announcements of sensational 'bargains,' closing out sales, fire and smoke damage sales . . . discount catalogues and phoney auctions."

The convention also passed a resolution seeking repeal of a section of the combines act which prohibits manufacturers setting prices and designating dealers who may sell their products.

It said the section discriminates against brand-name manufacturers while allowing chain stores, department stores and co-operatives to "maintain prices on their own private brands."

Also approved was a resolution opposing give-aways by savings, trust and "other similar companies" to attract depositors. It described such offers as "detrimental to the retail trade."

In another resolution, delegates attacked "confusing packaging, particularly of food and drugs. It asked manufacturers to co-operate voluntarily in ending such packaging and labelling.

Among other resolutions passed was a call for federal establishment of a marketing advisory council to provide a voice for independent merchants.

Delegates also approved resolutions calling for a single federal law to cover Sunday and holiday sales and mandatory adoption of daylight saving time.

No action was taken on a resolution urging a national trade organization study of store hours. The resolution was held for study.

Also approved was a resolution opposing tax concessions to credit unions and co-operatives.

Home-A-Day On Assembly Line Process

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A New Westminster company has combined automation with artisans for assembly-line production of two- and three-bedroom houses.

Coast Homes Ltd. turns out one new house a day under a $500,000 contract with Columbia Cellulose Co. for delivery of 30 pre-built dwellings to the wood product firm's new plant site at Prince Rupert on the northern British Columbia coast.

"As far as I know this is the first time assembly-line construction of houses this size has ever been tried," says William Friesen, Coast Homes manager. "We're very pleased with the results we've been getting."

The superstructure for each house is laid out at one end of the assembly line. Carpenters, plumbers, painters, plasterers and electricians work to a precise timetable as the house slowly moves down the line, on special rails.

Six days later the building emerges, plastered, primed and painted, awaiting transport by barge and tug to prebuilt concrete foundations in Prince Rupert.

SAVES MONEY

By the time the house leaves the hangar-type shed at Coast Homes' two-acre site here, it conforms exactly to rigid NHA specifications.

The houses range in size from 950 to 1,200 square feet. Most have three bedrooms and built-in stoves and fans. The New Westminster workmen even install fireplaces.

"About the only thing we don't put in is the drapes," said Mr. Friesen.

$275 MILLION SCHEME ON MAINLAND UNVEILED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Details were announced Tuesday for a huge downtown, skyscraper-studded waterfront development costing up to $275,000,000.

Plans for the development were announced June 10 by chairman N. H. Crump of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which is involved in the scheme with Woodward's Stores, the Grosvenor-Laing Development Co. (Canada) Ltd.

City council was told Tuesday the development would include up to 14 office towers; 1,000 apartment units including three high-rise buildings; a 40-storey hotel of 600 rooms; a large department store, and car parking space for 5,000 vehicles.

Railway Income Up For Both CNR, CPR

MONTREAL (CP)—Net railway operating income for Canadian National Railways for the month of May amounted to $4,768,000 compared with $2,983,000 for the corresponding period last year.

Railway operating revenues totalled $80,236,000 and expenses, taxes and rents totalled $75,468,000. In May, 1965, railway operating revenues were $70,073,000 and expenses, taxes and rents amounted to $67,090,000.

The aggregate net railway-operating income for the year as of May 31 was $10,086,000.

MONTREAL—Canadian Pacific Railway announced Tuesday net earnings of $4,077,819 for May, an increase of $77,082 over May, 1965.

Revenues were $46,830,632 and expenses $42,752,813, compared with $42,757,295 and $38,756,558 in May one year ago.

Net earnings from Jan. 1 were $21,480,526, an increase of $6,923,235 over the first five months of 1965.

Five-month revenues were $226,295,806 against $209,470,811 and expenses $204,815,280 against $194,913,520.

Claim Increased

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dynamic Petroleum Products Ltd. has amended its statement of claim from $149,000,000 to $191,700,000 in its action against Pan American Petroleum Corp., according to its annual report.

Dynamic has asked the courts to decide whether it is entitled to 100 per cent interest in some 23,000 acres in the Rainbow Lake area, leases now operated by Pan American and Mobil Oil Canada Ltd. who contend that a 3 per cent gross over-riding royalty is Dynamic's only interest.

Salmon Can Not Adapt

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dr. P. R. Larkin, head of the federal biological station at Nanaimo, warned Tuesday that salmon cannot be produced like instant coffee and British Columbia may be jeopardizing its future supply for the sake of a few immediate gains.

Power dams, log drives, removal of forest cover, road construction and pollution by everything from DDT to detergent all pose a threat to the maintenance of salmon stocks, he told the annual convention of the Canadian Feed Manufacturers Association here Tuesday.

"Good management of existing stocks and efforts to increase production may well be defeated by the burgeoning effects of people and their many kinds of enterprise," he said.

Dr. Larkin said salmon are sensitive creatures adapted to a particular way of life and will not persist if they are exposed to man-made deterrents.

Doctor's Brief 'Anemic, Naive'

Commons Drug Price Inquiry Shocked at Restraint Plea

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Doctors and laymen participating in the Commons drug prices inquiry have expressed varying degrees of criticism or dismay about the stand of organized medicine on the question of drug prices.

"You've shaken my faith in doctors," said Joseph O'Keefe, (L—St John's East) at one point during the appearance Tuesday of doctors representing the Canadian Medical Association.

"I feel your brief is not just anemic, it's naive," commented Reid Scott (NDP—Toronto-Danforth) to another.

Mr. O'Keefe's comment stemmed from a statement by Dr. Ramsay Gunton, chairman of the CMA's pharmacy committee and professor of therapeutics at the University of Toronto, that direct-mail advertising by drug manufacturers might pressure doctors into prescribing drugs that should not properly be prescribed.

When challenged on the point by Mr. O'Keefe, Dr. Gunton replied that doctors are "human like anyone else" and some fall victims to drug manufacturers pressure campaigns.

Dr. Fred Fallis, a Toronto general practitioner and a member of the CMA, said he thought Dr. Gunton meant that a doctor's mind may be made up on the basis of "lightly-considered" material.

"Perhaps it (mailed material) makes us lazy and perhaps we are taken in by the slickness."

Direct Mail Drives Scored

Both CMA representatives agreed that direct mail advertising by the drug manufacturers is objectionable. Dr. Gunton said he believes it adds to drug costs. Dr. Fallis said the profession is fed up with it although there is less of it now than a few years ago.

Mr. Scott's criticism of the CMA's brief as naive stemmed from a recommendation that the drug manufacturers exercise voluntary price restraint to help cut drug costs.

Dr. Gunton called the proposal a "plea" and Mr. Scott commented that all this amounted to was asking the drug manufacturers to be "nice fellows."

Mr. Scott also tangled with Drs. Gunton and Fallis about "detail men" who are salesmen sent by drug manufacturers to encourage druggists to stock the manufacturers' brand of drugs. Mr. Scott called them "pushers for the drug companies."

Mr. Scott asked why Dr. Gunton would oppose a Crown corporation in the drug-manufacturing field. Dr. Gunton said it would remove the private enterprise initiative which now is responsible for nearly all new drug discoveries.

"I suggest you look at the minimal amounts the manufacturers spend in Canada on research," retorted Mr. Scott. "They tried to bamboozle us with the same arguments last week."

Dr. Lewis Brand (PC—Saskatoon) was critical of CMA support for a fee-for-service method of setting retail prices rather than percentage markup.

Fee-for-Service Plan Backed

Dr. Gunton said the CMA supports the fee-for-service idea in principle. He thought the increase would be small in the lower-price drugs and would bring down the price of higher-priced drugs.

He noted that the CMA also recommends insuring against the cost of drugs and suggested that the total drug bill to Canadians would be lowered through fee-for-service dispensing.

Bryce Mackasey (L — Montreal Verdun) disagreed, saying it would add hundreds of thousands of dollars to the total cost.

Dr. William Howe (NDP—Hamilton South) said two CMA recommendations would mean going back to the old means test and continuing "high profits" to the manufacturers.

MOVING eastward is William G. M. Oliver, 51, of Sherbrooke, Quebec, who has been appointed new Canadian ambassador to Indonesia. He was ambassador to Costa Rica, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama and El Salvador.

SESSION LIKELY TO CONTINUE INTO JULY

NDP Pushes All-Out Fight for $100 Pension

OTTAWA (CP) — A weary Commons that was looking forward to a summer recess beginning Thursday night now finds itself facing a New Democratic Party filibuster that could carry the session deep into July.

Stanley Knowles, NDP House leader, announced Tuesday night the party plans a last-ditch battle to have the $75 monthly old age pension increased by $25 and given to all aged 65 or over, with no conditions.

The announcement came during second reading of Canada Assistance Plan legislation. Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) moved an amendment to provide $100 monthly old age pension.

The NDP, with Creditiste and Social Credit help, then blocked a Liberal move to have the House sit an hour later than usual.

Committee Chairman Herman M. Batten planned to rule on the amendment today. Government spokesmen said it was blatantly out of order.

Mr. Knowles said even if the amendment is thrown out, the party will battle for an increased pension during second reading of the bill. With 21 members, the party could extend debate well into next week.

Yet to come is a resolution on medical care plus clean-up of several other bills the government wanted passed before the recess.

Earlier Tuesday, the Commons passed bills to:

—Add $50,000,000 to the Atlantic Development Board's fund;

—Increase to 95 per cent the present 50-per-cent rebate to the provinces of federal corporation tax collections from privately - owned gas, steam and electric utilities;

—Establish the Company of Young Canadians;

—Integrate existing federal pension plans with the Canada Pension Plan.

A bilingual storm blew up again on a bill to set up a Crown agency to operate the $36,000,000 National Arts Centre in Ottawa. The debate was adjourned when Creditiste MPs indicated they were ready to speak at length.

Liberal back-bencher Raynald Guay (Levis) wanted bilingualism on the art centre's board. He appeared ready to withdraw his amendment after a personal appeal by Prime Minister Pearson, but Creditiste objections left the matter up in the air.

The Canada Assistance Plan bill came up an hour before adjournment. It provides for increased federal funds to provinces to provide aid for the aged or needy.

Mr. Knowles said the plan is a mixture of good and bad. The bad was the means test required. He then moved his amendment, a few minutes before the regular adjournment hour.

Five Victoria Greats Among First Into Hall-of-Fame

DAVE TURNER

VANCOUVER — Five Victoria men who made outstanding contributions to Canadian sport have been selected as charter members of the new British Columbia Sports Hall of Fame.

Archie McKinnon, Lester Patrick, Torchy Peden, Dr. Dave Turner and Norm Baker were named along with 19 other athletes and administrators at a luncheon here Tuesday.

Those 24, along with about 20 other nominees, who will be chosen soon, will be officially installed Aug. 23 at the B.C. Building on the Pacific National Exhibition Grounds.

McKinnon, who had the distinction of being selected as swimming coach and track and field coach of Canadian teams at different Olympic Games, was selected as an administrator. McKinnon, also coach of Empire Games squads, developed many of Victoria's most famous athletes.

The late Lester Patrick, an outstanding hockey player and considered one of the game's greatest coaches and managers, was named as a builder of hockey.

Dr. Turner, deputy minister of the department of recreation and conservation, was honored for his contribution to soccer. He was picked several years ago as the top Canadian soccer player of the first 50 years of this century.

ARCHIE McKINNON

Baker and Peden were also named athletes of the half century in their sports.

Peden, an Olympic Games contestant in 1928, became one of the world's greatest professional bicycle racers. Noted for his endurance, the big redhead was considered the top six-day rider for many seasons and held the all-time world record for six-day victories from 1947 until last year.

Baker, now with the Saanich police force, starred with Victoria basketball teams before moving on to a professional career that included seasons with Chicago, Boston and Vancouver pro teams.

Also among the first group to be selected to the B.C. Hall is Lorne Loomer, now a Victoria resident. Loomer, who has taken a position at the University of Victoria, earned fame as a member of UBC rowing teams that won Olympic gold medals.

Other UBC oarsmen honored are Don Arnold, Walter D'Hondt, George Hungerford and Arch McKinnon, of Vancouver.

Included in the builders and administrators named Tuesday were Stanley V. Smith, organizer of the British Empire Games at Vancouver in 1954; R. P. (Bob) Brown, known as "Mr. Baseball" in Vancouver for almost 50 years; Fred Hume, who supported and promoted hockey, soccer and lacrosse in Vancouver, and Frank Read, the man who developed some of the great UBC rowing crews.

On the list of athletes chosen were double Olympic sprint king Percy Williams; Olympic high jump winner Dunc McNaughton; Cyclone Taylor, first man to be inducted into the Canadian hockey hall of fame; golfer Stan Leonard; sprinter Harry Jerome; former world welterweight boxing champ Jimmy McLarnin, and Doug Hepburn, one-time world weightlifting champion.

Completing the list of athletes were famed tennis star Jack Wright and Mary Stewart, the little Vancouver swimmer who cracked world records.

Refs 'Killing' Irish—Bertoia

An irate Shamrocks coach today charged "atrocious" refereeing, and not his team's manpower problems, is rapidly "killing" Victoria's tenure in the Inter-City Lacrosse League.

Coach Bert Bertoia labelled the officiating in Tuesday's game at Vancouver "the worst exhibition I've ever seen."

Vancouver won, 12-6.

The same two clubs meet again in Memorial Arena tonight.

"Considering the refereeing and the fact that we played without five regulars, that was a flattering result. With all the help they had, Vancouver should have won by a lot more than six goals."

'WOULDN'T CALL ANYTHING'

Bertoia released his tirade despite the fact Shamrocks drew eight minutes in penalties, Vancouver 22, including a misconduct to Gary Stevens.

"I thought the refereeing two games ago on the mainland was bad. It was nothing compared to the job we got last night. They just wouldn't call anything."

Bertoia was particularly incensed over the refusal of referees Bill Colburne and Ron Foulis to assess what the Victoria coach felt were "glaring infractions" against Glen Vickers and Nirmal Dillon.

'GLARING' OFFENSE

"When Dillon was high-sticked, Foulis raised his arm to call a penalty, but never did," said Bertoia.

"Then Pete Black of Vancouver wrapped Vickers and never got a penalty. It was such a glaring thing that Black unscrewed Vickers' helmet right off him.

"I'm not asking for the referees to bend over backwards because we're having a bad year. I just feel we should get our share of the breaks. This, we're not getting."

Rocks moved into Vancouver without regulars Tom Collett, Reg Foster, Ron Jay, Ranjit Dillon and Lonnie Restell. Jay and Restell were unable to make the trip because of work committments and both are expected back tonight.

MUNROE TOP MAN

Foster, Dillon and Collett all are on the injured list. Dillon and Foster were injured some time ago. Collett suffered a shoulder injury at work early Wednesday.

Vancouver got the jump early and never looked back. Carlings scored the first four goals of the game and led 6-2, 6-3, 9-4 by quarters.

Sparking Vancouver's move to within three points of front-running Coquitlam were Bill Robinson (three goals), Stevens (two) and Bob Babcock (two).

Bill Munroe figured in four of the six Victoria goals, scoring three and setting up another.

JUNIOR SOFTBALL CLUBS BID FOR ISLAND CROWN

View Royal Centennial Park will be the site this weekend of a six-team struggle for the Vancouver Island junior men's softball championship.

All teams in the three-day, double-loss elimination tournament will see action in Friday's three games.

View Royal (Denford Electric) will face Victoria (Morrison Motors) at 2 p.m.; Sooke (Forest Products) will tackle Nanaimo in the second tussle at 4, and Langford (Red Lion Inn) will play Esquimalt (McLarens) at 6.

Saturday and Sunday games are scheduled for 10 a.m., noon, 2, 4 and 6 p.m. Sunday's 6 p.m. game may not be required.

The winning club will receive a trophy presented by the View Royal Centennial Committee, along with the title. All proceeds from the tourney will be used to promote junior softball.

Early Barrage Sinks Rawlings

Greaves Movers got away to a fast start Tuesday night at Hampton Park and made the opening outburst pay off for a 5-3 Senior Amateur Baseball League triumph over Rawlings.

The Movers, who stretched their league lead over Trnasport Workers to a full game, greeted pitcher Myron Wallace with a six-hit barrage in the first inning.

Jim Leard, Dave Rivers and Bob Bowles rapped singles before Wallace retired a batter. With two out, Vic Skinner, Gerry Ciochetti and Butch Rivers added successive singles and Greaves had a 4-0 lead.

Ciochetti singled home another run in the third.

George Hemming received credit of the pitching win, although the sore-armed southpaw needed relief help from Bob Burrows, who finished with two shutout innings.

SHARP FIELDING

Barry Cosier did most of the damage against Hemming. The hustling Rawlings shortstop doubled and scored in the second frame and belted a two-run homer in the fourth.

The losers contributed some fine fielding efforts. First-baseman George Brice, Cosier and outfielder John Martin all made spectacular defensive plays behind Wallace.

Greaves get a chance to boost their first-place margin tonight when they tackle Kings at 6:30.

Alou Recalled From Phoenix

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—San Francisco outfielder Ollie Brown has been sent down to the Giants' Phoenix club of the Pacific Coast League and Jesus Alou, who was sent to Phoenix on June 12, has been recalled, the Giants announced today.

Toe Blake Signs For Another Year

MONTREAL (CP) — Hector (Toe) Blake, the National Hockey League's most successful coach, today signed a one-year contract to guide Montreal Canadiens for the 1966-67 season.

Blake, who has led Canadiens to seven Stanley Cups, including last season, and eight league championships in his 11 years at the helm, agreed to terms after receiving a clean bill of health from club doctors.

Sam Pollock, Canadiens' general manager, said Blake will continue with the club on a year-to-year basis, pending the outcome of annual medical examinations.

Blake, elected earlier this month to the Hall of Fame for his exploits as a player, said he has every desire to remain with the club in future years.

Blake was appointed Montreal coach prior to the start of the 1955-56 season and built up one of the greatest coaching records in NHL history.

From 1955 through the 1959-60 season Canadiens won five straight Stanley Cup championships. They next won it in 1964-65 and last season repeated by defeating Detroit Red Wings in six games.

Terrell Wins Handily, Williams May Be Next

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Ernie Terrell of Chicago, World Boxing Association champion, Tuesday night gave away two rounds on low blows and still won a lopsided decision over dogged New York Doug Jones.

Terrell's next opponent may be Cleveland Williams, the Houston heavyweight on the comeback trail after a serious wound from a highway patrolman's gun.

Williams appeared on the card Tuesday night when Terrell won a unanimous 15-round decision over Jones before 9,346 fans who paid $102,165. Cleveland proceeded to beat up Tod Herring of Houston so badly he got a technical knockout early in the third round.

Williams' manager, Hugh Benbow, already has offered $50,000 to Terrell to fight his boy. Terrell also has a $75,000 offer to fight Canadian George Chuvalo, the man he defended his title against the first time last November.

Jones was bitter about Terrell's holding tactics in the late rounds — something the crowd booed lustily. Jones said it was a wrestling match, not a boxing match.

The second and 14th rounds were taken away from Terrell for low blows. Before the referee, Ernie Taylor, could even rule on the second foul, a Jones second, Rollie Hackmer, rushed across the ring and the referee had to order him out.

Terrell said he had hurt his hand on Jones' head "or I would have knocked him out."

The WBA champion gets $40,866 from the live gate while Jones receives $25,541. The fight also was carried over 67 outlets on closed television and Terrell gets 42½ per cent of that revenue while Jones receives 20 per cent.

Terrell should wind up with about $250,000 from both sources and Jones about $125,000.

They'll Remember Ollie For More Than Coaching

"He was more than a good basketball coach. He was a fine person."

Thus did Ron Bowker, one of his players, sum up today the feelings of the Victoria sports community for Ollie Goldsmith, 52, killed Tuesday in an industrial accident at Victoria Machinery Depot.

Bowker, a member of Victoria Chinooks coached by Goldsmith, has like many young city basketball players, fond and long memories of Goldsmith going back to his days at First United.

"I first played under Ollie as a bantam," Bowker said. "But I had known him before. As long as I can remember he was interested in boys and basketball.

"How do you replace a man like him?"

Harold Turner, Chinooks' manager, described his feelings: "A great shock. A great loss.

"Ollie was a poor loser in that he hated to lose. But he was a good loser in that he was a true sportsman."

In an association spanning two decades Turner recalled "never a harsh word ever came from Ollie."

"He had a rough exterior," Turner said. "But he was a warm, kindly man."

A native Victorian, Goldsmith played basketball for Victoria Beavers, at the time a junior power in the city, later moved up to the senior Dominoes.

He spent nine years with the First United Church basketball organization.

CANADIAN CHAMPS

In 1965 in his first year at the helm, Victoria Chinooks won the national junior men's championship at Hamilton.

Last season he took Chinooks to the national final. They lost to University of B.C. Jaycees.

Today tributes flowed . . .

● Don Frampton, a Chinook forward: "A good coach, a really good coach. He'll be hard to replace."

● Leon Hall, Chinook executive member: "It's quite a loss. We had a meeting to make plans for next season and Ollie was there. He's the sort you miss."

● Frank Schroeder, president, Victoria Basketball Association: "A terrific loss, but a lot of Victoria boys will be a real memorial. The kind of work Ollie did shows up in young people."

Goldsmith is survived by his wife Georgina, two sons, Oliver Jr. and Bruce, a daughter, Ruth, and two grandchildren.

McCall Bros. are in charge of arrangements. Funeral services will be announced later.

Dennis with Leos For Full Season

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lonnie Dennis, twice the All-Canada offensive tackle, said Monday he will return to full-time duty with the British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference.

Dennis was a WFC all-star in 1962, all-Canada in 1963 and 1964 and was considered a key man on the Lions' offensive line when the team won the Grey Cup in 1964.

Dennis informed the Lions Monday he will quit his job with the Newport Beach, Calif., police department and concentrate on football this season.

"We thought all along Lonnie would be back . . . he'll be here for sure now," said coach Dave Skrien.

Skrien said Dennis confirmed his plans in a telephone call from California.

The 235-pound tackle ended five years with the Lions after the Grey Cup Championship year.

He returned late in 1965 to try and help on a part-time basis the Lions fell to fourth-place and missed the WFC playoffs.

Dennis, 29, will join the Lions when they open their summer training camp Sunday at Courtenay. Lions opened their rookie camp in Vancouver Monday.

Kyle Resigns Hockey Post

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Gus Kyle has resigned as coach of the St. Louis Braves of the Central Hockey League.

Tommy Ivan, general manager of the Chicago Black Hawks, parent club of the Braves, said Tuesday Kyle submitted his resignation Monday.

The team finished a disappointing fourth last season and lost in the first round of the playoffs.

Six-Man Bout Mat Feature

Six men will climb into the Memorial Arena next Tuesday for the feature bout of a professional wrestling card.

It will be a tag-team tussle, in which 600-pound Haystack Calhoun will join forces with Paddy Barrett and Don Leo Jonathan against John Tolos, Durch Savage and Tony Borne.

Tolos and Jonathan are also scheduled to match muscles in a single bout. Other matches will send Paul Jones against Mighty Ursus and Gorilla Marconi against Eric Froelich.

Action starts at 8:15 p.m.

LONDON NEXT FOE FOR CASSIUS CLAY

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Cassius Clay is virtually set to meet Britain's Brian London in London Aug. 6 and West Germany's Karl Mildenberger in Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 10 or 17.

In London, British promoter Jack Solomons said only one or two little things still had to be ironed out before Clay and 32-year-old London sign contracts for July 30, Aug. 6 or Aug. 13 in London, Blackpool or Mancester.

If successful against London, Clay then would take on Mildenberger, the European champion, at Frankfurt, Sept. 10 or 17.

Both fights would be telecast to the United States and other parts of the world just as was done for Clay's defence against Britain's Henry Cooper at London, May 21. Clay stopped Cooper in the sixth round.

Clay still is subject to a military call-up under the 1A draft classification which he is appealing.

London has bounced up and down in the fight game like a yo-yo. He was knocked out by Floyd Patterson, then the heavyweight champion, in the 11th round at Indianapolis on May 1, 1959.

Red Lions Reduced To No (0) Pitchers

"Wanted: Healthy, available pitcher. Needed desperately. Please report to Red Lions, Senior A Men's Softball League."

If this classified appears today, there's a good reason.

Red Lions' one (1) pitcher, Don Lyons, was taken to hospital Tuesday night suffering from torn knee ligaments. He will be out indefinitely.

The team's only other pitcher, Mike Rye, obtained Sunday in a trade from Luckies for Ray Rawnsley, is a sailing sailor. Rye is due back in port this week. He had better be or Red Lions are in trouble.

Lyons tumbled from the mound after throwing three pitches at Heywood Park.

Bob Haldane finished up. Sooke batters reached him for nine hits, winning 12-1.

Glen Bullen, on the mound for Sooke, struck out 14.

Aussie String Ending?

LONDON (CP) — Spaniard Manuel Santana today was favored to beat unseeded Australian Owen Davidson. A victory by Santana would leave the Wimbledon tennis finals without an Australian for the first time in 11 years.

Santana Tuesday won against Australia's Ken Fletcher 6-2, 3-6, 8-6, 4-6, 7-5.

The other big semi-final match today has Dennis Ralston of the U.S. going against South Africa's Cliff Drysdale. Tuesday Drysdale upset Australia's Tony Roche, the No. 2 seed, 9-7, 6-2, 6-2.

Britain's Mrs. Ann Jones defeated Nancy Richey of the U.S. 4-6, 6-1, 6-1, while the defending women's champion, Margaret Smith of Australia crushed Trudy Groenman of The Netherlands 6-0, 6-4.

Maria Bueno of Brazil downed Francoise Durr of France 6-4, 6-3, and Mrs. Billie Jean Moffitt King of the U.S. overcame Annette van Zyl of South Africa 1-6, 6-2, 6-4, in other women's quarter finals.

In today's semi-finals, Miss Smith will play Mrs. King and Mrs. Jones will face Miss Bueno.

AMONG FAVORITES for mens' title in Pacific Northwest Golf Association championships here next week will be Dick Williams, two-time Washington State amateur king from Seattle. Being held in Victoria for 10th time since it was launched in 1899, week-long tourney starts Monday, with men playing at Royal Colwood and women competing at Uplands.

Mays Third on List Now, And It's Okay with Ted

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ted Williams, one of the most feared sluggers in baseball, doesn't mind being passed in the all-time home run derby by Willie Mays.

"I'm very happy for him," Williams said in extending Mays congratulatons for displacing him as the game's No. 3 home-run-hitter.

Williams, scheduled for induction into the Hall of Fame next month at Cooperstown, N.Y., played for Boston Red Sox from 1939 until his retirement in 1960. Despite hitches as a marine corps flyer in the Second World War and the Korean conflict, he batted .344 and hit 521 homers.

Mays passed Williams by cracking his 522nd career home run in San Francisco Giants' victory over St. Louis Cardinals Monday night. The Giants' spectacular centre fielder now trails only Babe Ruth, 714, and Jimmy Fox, 534, in career homers.

Mays made it 523 when the Giants topped the Cards, 7-1, Tuesday night.

Righthander Bobby Bolin held the Cards to two hits and the National League-leading Giants remained four games ahead of Pittsburgh Pirates.

Meanwhile, the Pirates downed Houston Astros, 4-3. Jim Bunning pitched a two-hitter for Philadelphia as the Phillies whipped the New York Mets 1-0, Cincinnati Reds dropped Los Angeles Dodgers, 3-1, and Atlanta Braves whipped Chicago Cubs, 4-2.

Bob Veale scattered eight hits for the Pirates. Run-scoring singles by Roberto Clemente and Jose Pagan in the fifth inning put Pittsburgh in front for good as Veale blanked the Astros over the last six innings.

Bunning, who pitched a perfect game in New York two years ago, allowed the Mets only two singles, in the fifth inning, and got the only run he needed on Bill White's two-out homer in the seventh.

Cincinnati won its 10th game in the last 11 as Sammy Ellis limited the Dodgers to five hits.

Tommy Harper slammed a homer and two singles, leading Cincinnati's attack.

ATHLETICS HOT

Kansas City, perennial American League tailenders under a succession of frustrated managers, continued their upswing under new pilot Alvin Dark Tuesday night by ambushing first-place Baltimore Orioles 4-3.

The victory was the fifth for the Athletics in their last six starts. They are eighth in the American League standings, nine games below the .500 mark but only one-half a game behind New York Yankees who lost 5-3 to last-place Boston Red Sox.

Dark has his club on the move. After losing 15 of their first 20 games, the Athletics have gone 30-29 since May 8.

In other games, Detroit Tigers clobbered California Angels 15-3, Minnesota Twins blanked Cleveland Indians 4-0 and Washington Senators beat Chicago White Sox 4-1.

LOST 10 PLAYERS

Ten Kansas City players have departed since spring training—including 1965 favorites John Wyatt, Wayne Causey and Ken Harrelson — but Dark is getting mileage out of newcomers Danny Cater (White Sox), Roger Repoz (Yankees) and Jim Gosger (Red Sox).

Cater and Gosger each doubled in a run against the Orioles in the first inning while rookie Chuck Dobson (14-6) and relievers Ken Sanders and Jack Aker checked Baltimore on six hits.

Mike Hershberger's sacrifice fly after singles by Bert Campaneris and Gosger added a run in the fifth and Sander's run-scoring single in the sixth wound up the Kansas City attack.

Home runs by George Thomas and Mike Ryan, coupled with five Yankee errors, helped the Red Sox down New York

Talent Running Short, Bisons May Withdraw

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP)—Fred Hunt, general manager of Buffalo Bisons, asked the American Hockey League Tuesday to suspend Buffalo's franchise, reportedly because Buffalo is unable to get top quality players.

Hunt made the surprise move at the league's annual owners' meeting.

The board of governors immediately requested Buffalo owner Ruben Pastor to attend today's meeting to discuss the matter. He said he would.

Buffalo, which reportedly lost money last year even though the nine-team league grossed over $3,000,000, has had a working agreement for several years with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

Last year, however, Black Hawks called up several outstanding players from the Bisons, including Art Stratton, Len Lunde and John Mizuk.

Several of the Bison players called up were later reassigned to the Hawks' St. Louis team in the Central Professional League.

Buffalo joined the AHL in the 1936-37 season and has won four Calder Cup championships.

In another matter, the board of governors named Paul Bright, Cleveland president and general manager, as interim president of the league.

Bright is also a member of a committee that will recommend a successor to Jack Riley, current president, who is resigning to become general manager of the new Pittsburgh team in the NHL.

The committee told the board it hopes to have its recommendation by Aug. 25, when the league meets in Toronto.

Seven men reportedly are being considered, including Ted Kerageorge, former Cleveland president; Les Cook, a former Cleveland player; Ken Reardon, former manager of Montreal Canadiens in the NHL; Frank Carlin, business manager of Quebec Aces, and Hunt.

ABBY BREAKS 880 RECORD

TORONTO (CP)—Abigail Hoffman, of Toronto, set a Canadian women's 880-yard record of 2:07.8 in a race here Tuesday night. Her time was 2.1 seconds lower than the mark she set in June, 1963.

RUNS AT CURRAGH

Irish Derby Favorite Inclined to Be Lazy

LONDON (CP) — Britain's Derby winner Charlottown, now a favorite for Saturday's Irish Derby at the Curragh, is being tipped by the experts as potentially one of the most successful horses ever bred in Britain.

The three-year-old black colt drew praise and interest last year by winning all three of his races — at Ascot, Sandown Park and the tough Newbury Autumn Cup.

Sired by Charlottesville, winner of the French Derby in 1960 and with Meld, who won the Thousand Guineas, the Oaks and the St. Leger classics in 1955, as dam, Charlottown seemed set fair for success.

UPSET EARLIER

But some racing experts who tagged him as Derby favorite this year had second thoughts when he was beaten by an outsider in a tryout at Lingfield.

Others noticed that past form showed the colt to be lazy if not given a strong lead by his jockey and attributed his surprise defeat to poor timing by the jockey in that race.

For the Derby his owner, Lady Zia Wernher, signed veteran Australian Scobie Breasley, still riding them home in his 52nd year. Breasley had ridden 116 winners at the horseshoe-shaped Epsom track and stormed home in the 1964 Derby on the Irish-bred Santa Claus.

Although not favgrite in this year's Derby, Charlottown was highly favored but his chances seemed to be reduced to nothing when just before the start he dropped a plate from his off-forefoot.

A hurried smithy's repair and a 15-minute postponement brought him back into the race and Breasley rode him into the winner's enclosure and the bookmakers' bad books.

His owner and trainer Gordon Smyth consider Charlottown now is in top condition and ready to take on all Irish challengers at the Curragh.

The owner's husband, Sir Harold Wernher, has announced plans for an onslaught on Britain's top races which could bring Lady Wernher almost $1,000,000 by the end of the 1967 flat-racing season.

After the Irish Derby, Charlottown will run in the St. Leger at Doncaster Sept. 7. The combined purses for these two events total more than $300,000.

OLD ONE-SPOT is a 1911 vintage locie being added to the attractions of the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum. It was transferred to the museum Monday from the home of director and former owner, Gerry Wellburn. Old One-Spot had to have its stack removed to come under the Silver Bridge at Duncan as it made its way to the museum site. The wood-burning Shay will be the frontispiece at the museum entrance, just north of Duncan. (Don Dingwall Photo).

Discrimination Cry Heard Over Tennis Court Delay

ISLAND DIGEST

GIBSON'S SOLD

SOOKE—The 20-year-old Gibson's shopping centre has been sold.

The hardware store has been sold to Marshall Wells, the dry goods store to Robinson's Stores and the supermarket to Mr. and Mrs. Stan Jones of Sooke.

"I just feel that it's time I had a change," said the owner and founder Bob Gibson.

"I will not be retiring but I will be concentrating on different things."

NORTH COWICHAN—Norman Bevan of North Cowichan Recreation Commission alleged Tuesday evening Somenos Community Centre is discriminated against.

A Somenos delegation headed by Mrs. Annabelle Thorne complained about delay in providing a tennis court as promised.

Mrs. Thorne asked why the commission changed its mind and decided to build only one tennis court at Fuller's Lake Park, Chemainus.

'MISTAKE MADE'

Coun. Dennis Hogan, chairman, admitted "a mistake was made."

He said municipal council would be asked today to make funds available for a court at Somenos.

Mr. Bevan said to the delegation: "I'll give you the real reason. There was not enough voting power from the southern representatives."

'OVERLOADED'

Mr. Bevan, of Maple Bay, has previously criticized the fact the commission is "overloaded" by members from the north end of the municipality.

Commissioner Jack Elford, Crofton, replied: "That is untrue. We are interested in all parts of the municipality."

But Mr. Bevan insisted: "Unless people in the south speak up they will always get the short end of the stick."

Boat Wreckage Found

VANCOUVER (CP) — Air-sea rescue officials said Tuesday wreckage of the fishboat Violet W., swamped in a sudden squall, has been found off Princess Royal Island, 100 miles south of Prince Rupert. George West of Prince Rupert, the vessel's skipper, is listed as missing and presumed drowned.

Zoo Owner Forced To Shoot Foxes

DUNCAN — Jim Oyen, owner of Duncan zoo, was forced to kill his two foxes at the weekend.

Vandals cut the wire of the foxes' pen and set them free.

Mrs. Oyen said today: "The foxes would not have attacked anyone but would certainly have raided any ducks or geese in the neighborhood.

"Jim tried to catch them with a net and bribe them back into the pen but they were too fast.

"He had to shoot them before they made off, and he felt terrible about it."

The foxes were a gift to the zoo but will be costly to replace.

The Oyens still have Josephine, baby offspring of the dead foxes.

Mr. Oyen learned of the foxes' escape from a visitor who saw one of them on the Trans-Canada Highway.

He found the strong wire of the pen cut and bent back seven feet above the ground.

Mr. Oyen said: "It was certainly the work of an adult with a pair of wire-cutters.

"I would rather have shot the guy who cut the wire."

Shift System Faces Campbell R. Schools

CAMPBELL RIVER — A shift system in elementary schools here is almost a certainty.

School board secretary-treasurer Phil Sampson said: "It's going to get worse before it gets better."

It is estimated the district will be short 16 classrooms this September.

The proposed Central Campbell River Elementary School will not be ready to open at the beginning of the term.

"With a known expansion of 10 per cent or more we are in dire need of the additional facilities we have planned," said Mr. Sampson.

Duncan Guide Selected To Attend Music Camp

Only 24 girls from B.C. will attend a special Girl Guide music camp July 23 to 30.

One of the girls selected is Heather McDonald, 14, of 1st Cowichan Company in Duncan.

The camp at Tsoona, near Chilliwack, is for girls particularly talented musically. Heather has had voice training and appeared in Cowichan music festival and school drama productions.

Mrs. Earl Jacques, a lieutenant of the Cowichan Company, says Heather has the leadership qualities necessary to qualify for the camp. She is a patrol leader.

One of the camp's objectives is to teach girls new songs and how to lead campfire sing-songs.

Salt Spring Island will be represented by Patricia Deacon.

Gilbey's find merry mixed gin drinks in old English Inns

ENGLAND'S OLDEST INNS have been around long enough to learn that Gilbey's London Dry has a perfect balance for mixed drinks. You can count on it to give you a fresh, clean tasting drink. Just like the Gimlet that they mix in the Cat and Fiddle at Hinton Admiral, a village on the edge of the New Forest.

Cat and Fiddle—Gimlet

The Cat and Fiddle is justly famous for its Gimlet, a refreshing drink made from Gilbey's London Dry and fresh lime juice. Close by in Wiltshire, at the Sign of the Angel, we discovered how to give a Gilbey's and orange juice a "frosty" edge. Wet a glass, then put it upside down in the freezer compartment. After half an hour it will have a sparkling "frosty" edge.

Eagle—Gilbey's Weasel

At the Eagle in London they mix a superb Gilbey's Weasel (made from Gilbey's and Bitter Lemon). They say the drink was named after a saddler's weasel (used for making holes in leather). A saddler who had premises at the rear of the Eagle enjoyed the drink so much that he would 'pop' or pledge his weasel when he was short of money.

Up and down the City Road
In and out the Eagle
That's the way the money goes
Pop goes the Weasel

You can rely on Gilbey's London Dry, a perfectly balanced gin that gives you a fresh, clean tasting drink. This gin is an international favourite, sold in 92 countries. It's been made by the Gilbey family for 109 years.

Big Brother Saves Burning Child

DUNCAN — Mrs. Dan Convery, of North Road, gives her son, Shane, 12, credit for saving the life of his young brother, Jimmy.

The story came to light Tuesday.

Saturday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Convery went to town shopping leaving Shane in charge of Jimmy, 8, Patsy, 10, and Coline, 9.

The other children were watching TV when Jimmy climbed on a kitchen chair to try and reach a piece of soap.

FELL ON STOVE

He slipped and fell across the electric stove which was on.

Jimmy panicked when his orlon sweater caught fire and he ran out of the house.

Shane ran after him, grabbed his brother and rolled him in the dirt to extinguish the flames.

Mrs. Shane said: "I'm pretty proud of him. He acted calmly.

"He took Jimmy back to the house, spread vaseline over the burns and then left him in the care of his sisters while he went to a neighbor for help.

Mrs. Allan Wilson drove Jimmy to the hospital and located his parents.

PROUD OF SHANE

Jimmy suffered first-degree burns to both hands, to one arm and his right side.

He is still in bandages in King's Daughters' Hospital but "resting comfortably."

Mrs. Converey said: "We're really proud of Shane. But for his presence of mind the house could have gone on fire with the other children in it."

TOP STUDENT Arthur Calvert of Port Alberni has been awarded the first vice-president's medal by the General Accountants' Association. The medal was awarded in recognition of the highest marks received by a third-year candidate.

Record Sales Profit Made By Doman's

DUNCAN—Doman Industries Ltd., a Vancouver Island trucking company, Tuesday reported record sales and profits in the first half of its fiscal year.

Herb Doman, president, said in his annual report profit was $147,502 or 41 cents a share, up 32 per cent from the same period last year.

He said sales were up 20 per cent to $3,000,000 and the allowances claimed for depletion, depreciation and interest jumped 88 per cent to $145,234.

The company also announced formation of a new company, Ladysmith Forest Products Ltd, which will invest more than $1,000,000 in a sawmill to build at Ladysmith harbor.

Ladysmith will be owned 70 per cent by Doman and 30 per cent by Pacific Logging and T. W. McKenzie Logging Ltd.

Duncan Riders Second

DUNCAN — A team of young Cowichan riders placed second at the B.C. Pony Club Rally at Langley.

They were Joy Stone, Wendy Lister, Lindsay MacRae, Milton McCool, Kelvin Green and Heather McDonald.

40-ACRE DEVELOPMENT APPROVED AT NANAIMO

NANAIMO — A 40-acre development near the Nanaimo General Hospital was approved Tuesday by the Advisory Planning Commission here.

The development by a Vancouver firm includes five parcels of land for multiple dwellings, a park, a shopping centre and a service station. The remainder will be for residential dwellings.

WHY DAIRY FOODS ARE YOUR BEST FOOD VALUE

Dairy foods are good foods. Milk is often called "nature's most nearly perfect food" because the minerals, proteins and vitamins contained in milk are found in no other single food.

Milk can't be made by machines. No one has yet invented a substitute for the dairy cow nor the many skills of the dairy farmer. Yet compared to most other foods, dairy foods have remained fairly constant in price.

Since May 1954, to the beginning of 1966, in most Canadian markets, the aggregate increase in home delivered milk (standard homo) has increased only 5 cents a quart.

In the same period, the dairy farmer shipping to these markets received only 2 cents per quart more for the milk produced on his farm. And yet the costs of farm operation have increased a great deal. So much so, that dairy farmers are leaving their farms at the rate of 10,000 each year. This could result in a future shortage of dairy foods and increased consumer prices.

Canada's dairy industry is vital to our economic and nutritional health. If dairy foods cost a little more than they used to, they'll still be your best food buy.

Independents Told

Carpenters Vote Strike Over Hours

Construction carpenters working for independent contractors in B.C. have voted 87 per cent in favor of strike action to back contract demands.

A union spokesman said today the independents likely will be notified today that the United Brotherhood of Carpenters is ready to strike.

The independents employ about half the 7,500 construction carpenters in B.C.

The other half work for 270 contractors who bargain as one unit. These contractors requested a government-supervised strike vote a month ago but the vote hasn't yet been conducted.

Main issue is the union's request for a seven-hour day. Also sought is a 30-cent raise and no pay reduction because of shorter hours in a two-year agreement.

Association contractors rejected the shorter hours and have unilaterally instituted their own proposals in place of the expired contract. This includes an extra 15 cents in each of three years.

Mine, Mill Strike Favored

TRAIL (CP)—More than 5,300 members of the Independent Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers at six British Columbia Cominco operations have voted overwhelmingly in favor of strike action in their dispute with the company.

Workers at the Trail, Kimberley, Riondel, the H. B. Mine at Salmo, Benson Lake and Con Mines completed voting Tuesday and 95 per cent of them voted in favor of the action.

Seventy-five per cent of the eligible voters cast ballots, union spokesmen said.

The union wants a package deal increase of 65 cents over their present base rate of $2.24½ per hour. The company had offered the union a 13-cent-per-hour increase plus fringe benefits amounting to 11 cents.

President Bob Keever of Trail Local 480 of the union said he was pleased to see the men united as much as they were during the last negotiations with the company.

Everything now hinges on a meeting tentatively scheduled for July 4, between the union bargaining committee, government-appointed conciliation officer R. S. Raguin, and Cominco representatives.

Freight Handlers At Work

MONTREAL (CP)—Some 600 freight handlers employed in Montreal harbor returned to work today, ending a nine-day walkout that had piled up 500 freight cars in the port.

The men, members of the Brotherhood of Steamship and Railway Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees (CLC), agreed to return to work after ratifying a joint offer by the CNR and CPR Tuesday night.

National Harbors Board officials said earlier that activity in the port had been seriously affected by the walkout. The freight handlers left their jobs June 20, two days after longshoremen in Montreal, Trois-Rivieres and Quebec City ended a 39-day strike.

Some of the men returned to work Tuesday night, a few hours after ratification of the agreement.

The new deal marks the first time Montreal freight handlers, part of the railways' general non-operating unions group, will be paid premiums for overtime work.

The open-end agreement provides time-and-a-half for work above a regular eight-hour shift, a night differential of 55 cents an hour for work after 7 p.m., time-and-a-half on Saturday and double-time Sunday.

The regular hourly rate ranging from $2.19 to $2.42 an hour remains the same. Previously, there was no overtime pay and the night differential was from 24 to 27 cents.

Decision Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Court of Appeal reserved decision Tuesday on appeals by teen-agers Kenneth George Calli and John Douglas Shoemaker against their capital murder conviction.

The youths were given life imprisonment by Mr. Justice T. A. Dohm when an assize jury convicted them in the beating death of Nicholas Williamson last Aug. 28 near Vancouver's Stanley Park.

ESKIMO ACQUITTED OF PERJURY

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Abraham Okpik, 37, the only Eskimo ever to sit on the Northwest Territories Council, was acquitted on a charge of perjury Tuesday by Mr. Justice J. H. Sissons of the territorial court. The crown said it would not appeal.

The acquittal allows Mr. Okpik continue to sit on the council, to which he was appointed last October a week after being acquitted of an impaired driving charge in Yellowknife.

'New Design Must Stress Comforts'

TORONTO (CP) —The president of Simon Fraser University in Vancouver says the future efficiency of Canadian industry demands that human comfort be made the primary concern in building design.

In an interview Monday after the opening address to the convention of the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air Conditioning Engineers, Dr. P. D. McTaggart-Cowan said:

"We must stop building greenhouses and wind tunnels."

He urged the convention to take the lead in research on the effect of environment on human activity. He suggested the society change its name to the "controlled environment society."

"We must put the focus back on human beings in buildings," he said. "We must find out what environments produce the maximum efficiency."

In his speech, Dr. McTaggart-Cowan told the society that owners of buildings should consult environmental engineers before calling in architects.

"A building can be just as attractive in spite of the fact that the architect is not the first man called in," he said. "I'm not trying to play down the beauty of structures, but you must get environment that you need for efficiency."

Dock Men Return In Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—A wildcat walkout by cargo checkers and stevedores, which has tied up the port of Toronto since last Friday, ended this morning when all workers returned to their jobs, a union spokesman said.

The 600 members of the International Longshoremen's Association (CLC) were urged back to work by union leaders Tuesday night after a meeting with federal mediator Bruce McRae.

The walkout by the longshoremen started last Friday in protest of liquor charges against two union members.

Tuesday's agreement made no concession to the workers' demand that a harbor policeman, whom they accused of manhandling the men charged, be suspended, but E. B. Griffith, general manager of the Toronto harbor commission, agreed to take appropriate action against anyone found guilty by the courts.

He said he would consider any grievances from the longshoremen once they returned to work.

OTTAWA, PROVINCES

Hospital Grant Demand Grows

OTTAWA (CP)—The pressure is being turned on for a second time this year to have the federal and provincial governments increase their grants for hospital construction to compensate for higher construction costs.

Members of Parliament have been receiving requests from such organizations as the Ontario Hospital Association to turn the heat on Health Minister MacEachen.

One result may have been a complaint Thursday in the Commons health and welfare committee by Marvin Howe (PC—Wellington-Huron) that current federal grants of $2,000-a-bed are unrealistic.

Mr. Howe asked whether the federal government has ever considered proposing a percentage - o f- construction - cost formula.

Dr. J. N. Crawford, federal deputy health minister, said some consideration has been given to this. The most popular suggestion had been that federal, provincial and municipal governments share equally.

Dr. Lewis Brand (PC—Saskatoon) asked whether an increase is planned in line with rising construction costs and, if not, why not.

Dr. Crawford said the question was a matter of policy and one to which the health minister would have to reply. He recalled that the federal-provincial tax structure committee was looking into the whole question of shared-cost programs.

Ottawa has been under a lot of pressure to increase hospital construction grants. Mr. MacEachen had announced earlier in the year that the grants, scheduled to end in 1968, would be continued another two years until March, 1970, and there was no plan for an increase.

Dr. Crawford said the federal government recognizes that $2,000 a bed is "not very much." It amounted to about 12 per cent of the cost of a new bed now.

But over the years a great many beds had been built under the stimulus of the grants and the extent of federal participation was something for the federal cabinet to determine.

The background to Dr. Crawford's statement includes last February's federal - provincial conference at which the federal government agreed, under provincial pressure, to extend the life of the construction grants.

The reason for the two-year extension at current levels was based on Quebec's decision at that time to opt out of such grants in favor of an equivalent cash payment provided some system could be worked out for doing so. Working out the system was left to the tax structure committee.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 29, 1966--PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

Among the good fellows who add spice to life in this outpost is one who packed his wife off to Europe for a holiday a few weeks ago.

"Don't worry about us," he assured his helpmate, speaking for his young son and himself. "We'll get along just fine."

And by their own definition, so they have. But when that favored housewife arrives home in a fortnight or so, she will find a massive task awaiting her.

This will be to re-civilize two males who have been batching long enough to evolve a primitive pattern of their own.

For a while after the plane bore her way, her menfolk stuck more or less faithfully to established routine. They ate their meals at the appointed times, sitting on chairs pulled up to a table. They swept and even dusted; made beds, changed sheets, washed their dishes, and put up lunches.

Then came a morning when sleeping in seemed more attractive than a proper breakfast, and an evening when the pair carried their plates into the living room rather than lose half a television program.

Thus breached, the walls crumbled rapidly. By the end of the first month, the father and only-too-willing son had shed the trappings and usages of our culture to such a degree that they might better be living in a wigwam.

★

What all this demonstrates seems to depend on how you approach the case.

I expect the viewpoint of the returned wife will be that everything goes to pot the moment a woman departs the scene. From the male angle, it becomes apparent that much of the housekeeper's round is waste motion, and that at least half the time consumed could be put to better, or at least more enjoyable uses.

It's an argument neither side can win, and any man who tries to lacks the sense he was born with.

In this troubled summer, when workers are demanding drastically increased rewards for their labor, it would take but a spark to start a housewives' strike.

Let matters reach that state and, gentlemen, we're in trouble.

The men I know who can wash and iron sheets, stuff and cook a fowl, sew in a zipper and juggle the tumblers of a jammed lock with a bobby pin wouldn't be heard from here to the corner if they all hollered together.

To make do is one thing, but to operate successfully so formidable a plant as a modern home is quite another.

★

There are those who will challenge this assertion. For their benefit—with help from a qualified source—I have compiled a check list.

Can you take a chuck steak and make it not only edible but palatable? (Me? Heck, no!)

Can you shrink one sweater to size, and unshrink another? (What do you think I am, a magician yet?)

How would you bulk out a dinner prepared for three to serve seven? (Impossible. But I've seen her manage it.)

How do you arbitrate between the son who must eat at 5 p.m. and bathe at 6, and the daughter who has to eat at 6 and wash her hair at 6:15?) (I don't . . . I start bellowing.)

In-laws have turned up for an unexpected overnight visit. You haul out a foldaway bed unused since last October, and discover mice are nesting in it. How would you cope? (Dunno. Stitch the mice in, I guess.)

Any housewife worth the name would take these situations in stride, and emerge fresh as a daisy.

Getting back to the lorn husband and son whose wife and mother at latest report was still on the wrong side of the broad Atlantic:

They haven't gone hungry, they sleep reasonably well, and they are still on speaking terms.

"But," wistfully observes the man of the house—and what a hollow term that can be—"it's a long, long time since we've tasted mushroom gravy."

INJURIES CLAIM WIDOW

A 62-year-old woman injured in a car accident Sunday died in Royal Jubilee Hospital Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Muriel Bourque, 216 Wildwood, had been in critical condition since the car she was driving ran into a tree on Royal Oak Avenue, near Lochside.

She received multiple fractures and internal injuries.

Mrs. Bourque, a widow, was born in Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, and had lived in Victoria for 10 years.

She is survived by a daughter, Daphne Beattie, and five grandchildren, in Prince George.

Funeral arrangements are in charge of Haywards and will be announced later.

There will be no inquest but a coroner's inquiry will be held. A post mortem was being conducted this afternoon.

Driver Blamed By Jury

Negligence Found In Youth's Death

A coroner's jury Tuesday night blamed the traffic death of a 19-year-old Goldstream youth on Glen Lake Road on Douglas Morrison, 22, driver of the car.

The accident was caused by Morrison's "negligence," the jury decided.

Fatally injured June 4 when the Morrison car skidded from the road and sideswiped a tree was Lee Williams, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Williams of the Goldstream Inn.

Tuesday's inquest confirmed that the youth died at St. Joseph's Hospital about 12 hours after the accident from extensive brain damage and complications from a fractured leg.

Williams' two companions at the time of the accident testified that they and a third youth had drunk two dozen beer on the night of the accident while cruising between Victoria and the Colwood area looking for beach parties or girls.

Morrison, an apprentice plumber who lives at 1608 North Dairy, estimated he'd had about eight beers. His two companions most of the evening, Robert Brown, 955 Goldstream, and Charles David Lanthier, 3137 Glen Lake Road, could not remember how many they drank. They said they threw the empty bottles from the car.

IN OWN CAR

Williams was picked up at a friend's house after midnight and later Lanthier said he left the Morrison car and drove home from Colwood in his own car.

The accident occurred about 200 feet from his house and Lanthier said shortly after arriving home, he saw headlights blinking down the road, investigated and found the wreck.

He said Tuesday he did not know why Morrison was apparently coming to his house but in a statement to police after the accident he told them he assumed Morrison was trying to beat him to the house by a different route.

Asked why he had driven home at the 30 mile an hour speed limit, something he admitted was "quite abnormal for me," he said because "I can't see the police behind me at night as well as during the day."

FORCED OFF ROAD

Morrison said the accident happened because he was forced from the road.

"A pair of headlights were coming at me on my side of the road."

While he wasn't drunk, he said his reflexes might have been "a little deficient."

His car took the right-angle turn near the Sooke Road at about 30 miles an hour, he said and was safely through the turn when he had to leave the road to avoid the oncoming vehicle.

Police earlier testified that skid marks stretched for 115 feet from where the car left the pavement to where it hit a tree broadside.

Morrison said he could not account for the violent impact. He denied he had been racing to the Lanthier house.

Morrison said Williams also had been drinking. It was apparent in his walk when he picked him up, Morrison said.

RIGGER Oliver Goldsmith was working on this crane float when boom broke late Tuesday, killing him. A 45-ton section of the oil rig being built by Victoria Machinery Depot swung, causing a whipping motion which snapped the boom. He was struck by a flying pulley.

Russ Seaman Recovered, Heads Home

Russian seaman Georgy Frolov said farewell to Victoria today.

The 35-year-old fisherman, who arrived here 12 days ago on a stretcher from the Soviet vessel Indigirka, will sail this week for his home town of Vladivostok.

A doctor from the Russian wheat ship, Otradnoe, now loading in Vancouver, arrived to pick up Frolov from Veterans' Hospital this afternoon.

Before leaving, the smiling Russian shook hands with hospital staff and through an interpreter thanked them for all their help.

Although suffering a head injury resulting from a fall aboard ship, Frolov has been up and about for the past few days.

MANY CALLERS

Hospital officials were surprised at the number of Russian-speaking people who called in to chat with the non-English-speaking seaman.

One man had him out to dinner, while another took him on a tour of the city.

Frolov will undergo further treatment when he arrives home.

Still More Drug Thefts

The third and fourth theft of equipment and drugs from doctors in the space of a week have been reported to city police.

Dr. Robert Morgan, 55 Tovey, told police his bag, containing a full bottle of morphine, tranquilizers and equipment totalling a value of $200, was stolen from his car parked in the St. Joseph's Hospital parking lot.

It was the second theft of a doctor's bag from the parking lot. Last Tuesday a bag belonging to Dr. Jack Patterson was taken.

Thirty capsules of tuinal have been reported missing from the office supply of Dr. Donald Shorting, 645 Fort.

Dr. Shorting told police there is evidence that quantities of the drug have been taken from his office over a period of time.

Last Wednesday a bag containing drugs and equipment, owned by Dr. Scott Groves, was taken from his car parked outside his Central Saanich home.

'LIQUID ARSENAL' SEIZED

Magistrate William Ostler today labelled the supply of over five dozen beer found in a youth's possession a "liquid arsenal."

Fining John Stevens, 4150 Tyndall, $40 on a charge of being a minor in possession of alcohol, the magistrate asked the youth: "Where were you going with that liquid arsenal?"

Court was told Stevens, in company with 20 or 30 other young people, was found May 28 by police with the beer in Mount Douglas Park.

Beach parties also had unhappy endings for Wilfred Brown, 3232 Wichlow, and Larry Marcotte, 2804 Rodney, who were fined $35 and $40 respectively on the same charge.

Brown was apprehended by Colwood RCMP drinking beer at a beach party at Esquimalt Lagoon.

HIDING BEER

Court was told Marcotte was seen hiding a case of beer behind some bushes at Blue Lagoon in Colwood the early morning of June 5.

When Edward Kellow, 1085 Hulford, was stopped for speeding in Duncan on May 21, police found a case of beer in his car.

The youth was fined $35.

Daniel Young, 543 Northcott, was fined $50 on a charge of consuming liquor in a public place when he appeared in central court.

Court was told he was seen at Esquimalt Lagoon with a partially consumed bottle of beer in his hand. The prosecutor said a "young lady" under 21 was with him.

"The young lady," said Young to the magistrate before being fined, "was my wife."

Town Status Next Year For Sidney

Sidney village commission chairman next year will become a mayor and commissioners will be called aldermen.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said today the village council has requested town status.

Approval is expected to be mailed to the council in the next few days.

OVER 2,500

Sidney is eligible for town status as its population has overshot the 2,500-mark.

It will mean extra responsibilities for the village.

As of Jan. 1, 1967, it will take over the administration of welfare and will pay a per capita grant towards welfare costs.

Assessments, now under the jurisdiction of the government, will be taken over by the town.

INQUIRY ASKED BY UNIONS

Union leaders met this morning with an inspector for the Workmen's Compensation Board following the death of a worker late Tuesday at Victoria Machinery Depot.

At the same time, the Victoria District and Vancouver Island Metal Trades Council issued a statement saying more attention should be paid to safety at the shipyard.

This morning's meeting was attended by Jim McConachy and Neil Hindle of the boilermakers, Don Douglas of the shipwrights, Ernest Orchin of the machinists, Andrew Manson of the Riggers, A. H. Gildemeester of the painters, and WCB inspector Richard Hill.

HIT BY TACKLE

The dead man, Oliver Goldsmith, was president of the Victoria Shipyard Riggers Union, Local 643, and a well-known local sportsman. He was struck by a tackle after a boom broke on a floating crane working on the $9 million offshore oil rig.

The metal trades council, an association of craft unions at shipyards and HMC Dockyard, sent a telegram to the chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board, "demanding a full inquiry" into the accident.

The statement added: "The metal trades council are of the opinion that more stringent safety rules should be observed in the shipyards.

"The council is further of the opinion that safety inspectors employed full time in the yards should be appointed by the WCB and should be fully qualified in safety procedures and regulations."

VMD general manager J. V. Steele said every possible safety measure is taken at the yard.

There was an active safety committee which discusses all safety measures.

"Any safety measure recommended to me is immediately implemented," he said.

'VERY LAX'

Mr. Manson, president of the council, called conditions at VMD "very lax—something drastic has to be done."

Last January, four persons were injured when a gangway erected to one of the pontoons collapsed sending them crashing to the ground. Three were taken to hospital.

At that time, union spokesmen said there is "good basis for complaint about general safety supervision."

Library Closed On Dominion Day

Victoria Public Library will be closed all day Friday for the Dominion Day holiday.

It will be open Saturday as usual, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., and until 5:30 p.m. for the children's section.

City Mourns Loss Of Top Sportsman

By TERRY IZZARD

Oliver Goldsmith died Tuesday, only a few yards from the spot where he was born 52 years ago.

The veteran sportsman died instantly when rigging from a giant floating crane fell on him.

Ironically, the place where he was killed was once his favorite playground.

And what is now a company paint store was once his home.

The tragic story of Mr. Goldsmith's death was related today by lifetime friends.

As investigators sifted through the debris of the mangled 100-foot crane boom which ended Mr. Goldsmith's life, they recalled the tiny cafe which once bore the name Tom Goldsmith.

Today, huge cranes and workshops of Victoria Machinery Depot tower above the Dallas Road waterfront.

Oliver Goldsmith knew it well, having worked as a rigger for the company since the beginning of the Second World War.

But he also remembered the Dallas Road of the early 1900s when as a young lad he played cowboys and Indians in the bushes behind his home.

SOUTH PARK SCHOOL

With his brother Tommy and sister Margaret he would board the long-forgotten tramcars outside his home for the ride to South Park School.

The shipbuilding boom of 1940 changed all that and his father, Tom, reluctantly sold the family business to make way for expansion.

What no one could have known was that one day the industry behind their home would one day lead to Mr. Goldsmith's death.

Since he lived on the spot and was a rigger by trade, Mr. Goldsmith decided to join VMD.

One of the company's oldest employees, he was supervising lifting of a 45-ton section for a giant, $9 million oil rig when death struck.

BOOM SNAPPED

Without warning, the crane boom snapped and toppled to the ground.

Mr. Goldsmith, who was standing on the float housing the crane, was struck by a heavy metal pulley.

Fortunately no one else was hurt, but the father of three was dead on arrival at hospital.

Workmen on the spot said the pontoon swayed while being lifted, hitting a block of concrete which caused a whipping motion in the crane boom.

The sudden stress was apparently too much for the boom which collapsed.

Surveyors from Ziddel Exploration Company, Portland, which leased the crane to VMD, were on their way to Victoria today to assess damage.

Meanwhile, it is not yet known to what extent the mishap will delay work on the oil rig.

The only crane of its kind on the west coast, it will require a new boom before being operational.

Operating the crane at the time of the accident was VMD employee Peter Ash, of 3876 Seaton. He was taken home suffering shock.

Meanwhile, coroner Edmund Jorre de St. Jorre has called an inquest which will open Thursday night or Saturday, depending on the result of police investigations.

Mr. Goldsmith leaves a wife, Georgina, at the family home, 1139 Balmoral, two sons, Bruce and Oliver, and a daughter, Ruth Margaret.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been announced.

Gaglardi Set To Sign Up For New Jet

Highways Minister Gaglardi has speeded up negotiations for his $480,000 Lear jet plane and hopes to wrap up the deal this weekend.

He said Tuesday the government will enter into a lease-to-purchase contract for $5,913.50 a month.

"We will be able to cancel the agreement at any time if the plane doesn't work out," he said. "I've been offered many other planes but they aren't good enough. They cost twice as much to run and need twice as much room to land."

The second-hand six-passenger jet cruises at about 500 miles an hour and would cut the usual 90-minute flight to Kamloops from Victoria to 20 minutes.

Ask The Times

Q. Has there been press censorship in Rhodesia? M.B.

A. According to World News Digest, 1966, the Rhodesian government first imposed press censorship following its declaration of independence Nov. 11, 1965. The government announced a widening of these powers Feb. 8, 1966.

PRAIRIE FORECASTER MORE USED TO RAIN QUERIES

If He Blows One, Blame the Wind

By BOB DONAHUE

Victoria's new weatherman, Allan McQuarrie, is a tall earnest man who speaks softly. His hair is silver grey.

But it is not, he says, the result of a 25-year affair with a fickle mistress, weather forecasting for the Department of Transport.

For the past 18 years he has been in charge of the Calgary weather office. He will officially take up his new duties here Aug. 1.

REGIONAL POST

Victoria's weatherman for the past 15 years, William Mackie, leaves July 4 for Vancouver where he will become regional superintendent of observation services for the Department of Transport.

Mr. McQuarrie says the two major problems in the weather sage business is the weather and the public, in that order.

TIMING COUNTS

"It's timing that counts in predicting the weather. If you say it's going to rain tomorrow and it rains tonight then everyone thinks you have made a bad forecast. It's not the forecast that was bad, it was the timing.

OATH OF OFFICE to always forecast sunny weather—and a pair of sunglasses—was given to Victoria's new weatherman, Allan McQuarrie, left, by weatherman William Mackie, who leaves next month for a new post in Vancouver. (Times Photo).

"But the main complaints made to weather forecasters are not about their forecasts, but just the bad weather."

He said he may have some difficulty in making the change from predicting prairie weather to coast weather.

"One of the distinct differences is that people on the prairies only want to know if it's going to rain and people on the coast are mainly concerned with the wind."

Mr. McQuarrie said for the first few weeks of his duties here his forecasts might be influenced greatly by just looking out the window of the Gonzales Hill weather station.

"That is where computers and science end and judgment begins."

He was born in a small town near Edmonton and grew up in the Peace River country. He then attended Normal School and became a school teacher for seven years.

He left the teaching job and went to the University of Alberta where he graduated in 1941.

He worked for some time in Montreal and Prince George before going to Calgary.

He is married and has two daughters, Donna, 18, and Shirley, 14.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Wood, 1702 Belmont Avenue, announce the forthcoming marriage of their eldest daughter, Diane Lorene, to Mr. Geoffrey Grafton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Grafton, of Ladysmith. The wedding will take place on Saturday, July 16, at 7:30 p.m., in First United Church. Rev. M. G. Fowler will officiate. (Meyers Studio).

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Bewley, 2817 Murray Drive, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marilyn Jean, to Mr. Ernest Conrad Sollid, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Sollid, of Hagensborg, B.C. The wedding will take place on Saturday, July 9, at 8 p.m., in Centennial United Church. Dr. S. J. Parsons will officiate. (Don Ryan Photos).

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Ralph, 3954 Cumberland Road, have announced the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Velma Sharon, to Mr. Gerald Wayne Plewes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Plewes, of Sidney, B.C. The ceremony will take place on Saturday, July 9, in First Baptist Church. Rev. J. A. Watson will officiate. (Chevrons Studio).

BEER, HONEY ACCENTS . . . . . . DAD'S OUTDOOR MEAL

Stone-Age Treats Take Modern Flavor

When primitive man first realized that cooked meat was tastier and more tender than raw flesh, he suspended his catch on forked sticks over a glowing fire; and thus introduced to twentieth-century man his gourmet-in-the-garden role. For some reason not known to a mere columnist, barbecue cooking seems to be a man's role and his delight. Of course, the pots and pans in the kitchen are still the chore of the distaff side, but the smell of wood smoke and the taste of charcoal-seared meat makes all forgiven.

The art of barbecue cooking has become very streamlined and, often, the foods are more interesting and exotic than those produced in the kitchen. These marinated in beer and honey spareribs, for example, tastily seasoned with dry mustard, ginger and nutmeg, send tempting aromas into the night air and satisfy hearty appetites.

BARBECUED SPARERIBS

Two strips of pork spareribs (2 lbs. approx.), 3 cups beer, 1 cup honey, 2 tbs. lemon juice, 2½ tsp. salt, 1½ tsp. dry mustard, 2 tsp. ground ginger, tsp. nutmeg.

Unless you are very sure of the quality of your spareribs, it is best to boil them for one hour before setting in the marinade.

Cut the strips into serving size pieces. Combine the beer, honey, lemon juice, salt, mustard, ginger and nutmeg in a large bowl and stir well. Add the prepared spareribs and leave to steep for three hours, basting and turning frequently.

When the coals are an ashen grey, wrap the spareribs in aluminum foil with a tablespoon of the marinade juices and cook until nearly done (20 to 30 minutes). Baste, then remove from the foil and finish cooking over the open fire so that the ribs are brown and crisp.

Serve with corn on the cob and a tossed salad.

Serves 4.

This recipe will make Dad a chef par excellence when he presides at the weekend barbecue chores in the garden.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Often women are startled by the figure faults which have sneaked up on them. These accumulate so gradually through the years, especially since weight distribution usually changes, that they appear before we know they are on the way.

Lowman

This is particularly surprising to the woman who has made it a point to control her weight so that she has the correct number of pounds and has indulged in sports during her younger years. Then the middle years come along. She may have dropped sports and dances only once every year or so. She exercises less and eats more, and at the same time her glandular system is slowing up. The result is—well you know!

Without exercise even the woman who is the ideal weight may have unexpected fatty deposits. I remembered many instances of this in my classes. I recall one woman especially who looked so slim that I said to her, "You must be joining this class for the health benefits of exercise rather than for figure molding." She replied, "Not for that alone, although I do believe in exercise. Look!" She lifted up her gym shirt and showed me the roll over her girdle, and the fat under her shoulder blades. They really did seem out of keeping with her flat abdomen, slim hips, thighs and legs.

She told me with great vehemence that she hated these deposits of fat. She wasn't conscious about them unless she wore a closely fitted dress. She said, "That's just impossible!" This was before the days of shifts. Then she told me that she had given up swimming because of the fat under the shoulder blades.

As I have said many times in this column if you are the correct weight, exercise is the magic wand with which you can spot reduce. Here is one of the exercises I recommend for rolls over the girdle and fat under the arms and shoulder blades.

Stand tall with your feet comfortably separated. Raise your right arm up by your ear as you bend to the left and try to touch the fingers of your left hand to the floor or to your left toe. Hold your right arm by your right ear as you do this, and keep your knees straight. Raise trunk and return arms to sideward position. This time raise your left arm up by your left ear and bend right. Continue, alternating left and right.

If you would like to have my exercises for slimming the waist, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for them. Address Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

IKE AND MAMIE

ABILENE, Kan. (AP)—Former president Dwight D. Eisenhower and Mrs. Eisenhower will observe their golden wedding anniversary Friday and a piece of white cake—with the frosting still intact—from their wedding reception in Denver is carefully preserved in the Eisenhower Library here. It is hard and virtually petrified.

This piece of cake and several other items recalling the wedding of Ike and Mamie have been grouped in a special display as part of the 50th wedding anniversary observance at the library.

There's also a box containing rice thrown on the young couple, several wedding gifts and pieces of china that were part of Mamie Doud's hope chest.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Nudism—A Matter Of Conscience

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you once before about this problem, but I turned chicken and tore up the letter. The problem has come up again, and this time I've made up my mind to mail it. My husband has been interested in nudism for some time, and has tried to get me to go to a nudist camp. I have nothing against camps like that, but I am just not the type who could strip down naked in front of so many people.

We have a lot of arguments about this, and have even come close to getting a divorce over it. I don't see how normal people could go to a place like that without getting a few "evil" thoughts. Am I wrong to think this way, or am I evil-minded? And do you think a man who really loved his wife could bear to see her walking naked in front of other men?

ANTI-NUDIST.

DEAR ANTI: One's attitudes about nudity are based on his early training, acquired inhibitions, and the customs and culture of the society in which he exists. Some people adopt unconventional beliefs that are not, necessarily, "evil minded." I believe, however, that everything has its place. Including the fig leaf.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were married four years and didn't seem able to have children. My sister had four little girls. Last year when her husband was in the penitentiary she started running around and got pregnant. She told us if we paid all her expenses we could have the baby when it was born. We agreed, and she went to the hospital, under my name, and had an adorable baby boy. It didn't seem to bother her to give it up at first, although I knew she always wanted a boy.

She lives hear us, and comes over every day to help with the baby. He is a doll, and I can see while she's holding or feeding him how much she loves him. It's about to drive me crazy. I have the funniest feeling the baby knows where he belongs. I love my sister, and it kills me to see her hurt. I feel like I have taken away the only thing she has ever really wanted. I love the baby, too. What should I do?

MIXED UP.

DEAR MIXED UP: If you and your husband legally adopted the child and were to move away and sever all ties with your sister, only then could it work out. But as long as you remain where your sister can see him every day you'll have no peace of mind. So you might as well give the baby back to his mother and adopt one through an agency.

Use Super-Bond Glue For Any 'Sticky' Job

By Penny Saver

Some eager beavers always insist on spending part of the summer, or even part of their vacations, doing odd jobs around the home or adding shelves in basements, and scores of other tasks. Those people are probably the ones who spend luxurious winter months in palm-shaded South Sea islands, while we do the jobs that they completed in the summer months! If you feel lazy this season, you can transform a corner of your basement or garage into a workroom, all ready for winter's production line, with very little effort.

The secret is a bottle of special glue. Instead of the usual hard work of boring holes into concrete in order to make enough shelves for a workroom, use this glue. One of its special properties is the ability to bond wood to concrete.

The first step is to apply two coats of the adhesive to the concrete and one generous coat to the strapping. Position the strapping and give it a few sharp taps, using a block and hammer. Let the band cure for three days, then screw on shelf brackets. It's as easy as that!

[illegible] has a whole world of uses. It will bond metal to ceramic, metal to metal, it sticks paper and cloth and is ideal for minor repairs on shoes and boots. Try it on leather handiwork too.

One bottle of this miracle adhesive, complete with applicator brush, sells for 69 cents. An added feature is that it will bond at temperatures as low as 50 degrees Fahrenheit. During severe conditions, basement walls for example may fall below that temperature, so before applying, wait until the temperature moderates. Abnormal wall temperatures will not affect the bond once it is obtained.

Mr. and Mrs. Do-It-Yourself, this item is a must in your household. Give Penny a call at 382-3131 if you want to know where she found it.

THE BETTER HALF

Parties Herald Marriage To Be Held Here Saturday

Several parties have been held to honor Miss Helen Small, whose marriage takes place this coming Saturday.

Her chosen senior bridesmaids, the Misses Lois Jaques and Sheila Smirl, and her sister, Mrs. Robert Story gave a shower in the Jutland Road home of Mrs. J. Smirl. The honor guest received a novel mending-kit corsage while ribbon and wool corsages were presented to her mother, Mrs. Lester Small and the groom-elect's mother, Mrs. Robert Jaques.

DECORATED UMBRELLA

The gifts were concealed by a decorated umbrella and were presented by the chosen junior bridesmaids, Eileen Holman and Marion Yole.

Guests included Mrs. C. Risebrow, Mrs. R. W. J. Story, Mrs. J. Boyd, Mrs. V. A. Williams, Mrs. M. McDougall, Mrs. H. Yole, Mrs. J. Smirl, Mrs. R. Smirl, Mrs. F. Holman, Mrs J. Stillwell, Mrs. G. Beese, Mrs. H. McKay, Mrs. D. Galey, Mrs. L. Britton, the Misses Etta Evans, Sharon McDougall, Marion and Carol Yole, Marjorie Britton, Adele and Arlene Smirl, Eileen Holman, Gwen Risebrow and Betty-Ann Story.

Members of St. John's Anglican Church Junior Auxiliary, of which Miss Small is assistant leader, presented her with an electric kettle when the group held its Family Night in the church hall.

Attending were the Misses Carel Alexander, Karen Barber, Sara Blake, Alice, Diane, Jean and Helen Daoust; Janet and Shelley Dong, Linda Chan, Ann, Joyce and Sheila Drew; Joyce Fairbrother, Beverley Griffiths, Theressa Haywood, Eileen Holman, Cindy and Sharon Kerrigan, Joyce Lang, Louise and Yvonne LeBel, Cheryl Macdonald, Margaret and Sandra Metcalfe, Susan Mader, Lynn Normandeau, Kathryn O'Connor, Heather Pidcock, Cathy Prior, Gwen Risebrow, Janice, Joanne and Ruby Rymer; Donna Rawlings, Catherine Sapsford, Shirley Simms, Marina Tom, Elaine Whitmore, Catherine Williams, Carol and Marion Yole, Carol and Beverley Gee, Marilyn Cyr, Cheryl-Ann Shore, Karen Mason, Kristine Middleton, Helen Nicholson and Debby Halbert.

FETED BY AUXILIARY

That same evening, members of St. John's Evening Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary, of which the bride-elect is a member, presented her with a decorated laundry basket containing many gifts for her kitchen.

The bride-elect's class of grades three and four at Honeymoon Bay School surprised her with a shower. Corsages of red roses and white carnations were presented to the honor guest, her mother and Mrs. A. Schroyeh with whom she's been boarding.

A minature red school-house contained the many gifts. A cake showing a replica of the school and grounds centred the refreshment table. Mothers of the pupils acted as serviteurs.

Lt.-Cmdr. and Mrs. R. H. Jones, of Camp Borden, Ont., and Victoria, have announced the engagement of their only daughter, Silvia Laraine, to Const. Robert Wayne Hunt, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Hunt, of Winnipeg. The wedding will take place on Saturday, July 9, at 7:30 p.m., in St. Martins-in-the-Field Church. Rev. B. Cowan will officiate.

Wedded Record

The longest marriage on record lasted 87 years; Sir Temulji and Lady Nariman were married in 1853, when both were five years old.

Clowns and Centennial Costumes . . . . . . Lively Music and Many Games

JOLLITY AT CATHEDRAL GARDEN PARTY

Fun set the theme for the large crowd that attended the annual garden party of Christ Church Cathedral, held on the cathedral grounds, Saturday afternoon. Even chilly breezes did nothing to dent the guests' enthusiasm.

Two of the stars of the show were colorful clowns, so well disguised that few recognized them as being Rev. Roy Hoult and Brian Gingell, people's warden. Even the dean joined in the jollity, emerging dripping on four occasions at the Dunking the Dean corner!

To get things swinging, the band of S. J. Willis School played lively tunes. Women in centennial costumes added extra color.

Sponsored by the Women's Parish Guild, the party was opened by Mrs. A. W. Toone, wife of Victoria's mayor. She was introduced by Dean Brian Whitlow and was presented with a corsage by Miss Maureen Moorhouse, who was chosen because she obtained the highest marks in the recent Sunday School examinations.

Guests were received by Mrs. Hoult and guild president Mrs. C. C. Riach. Mrs. F. N. Cowley was overall stall convener.

In charge of afternoon tea which was served in the gaily decorated gymnasium, were Mrs. H. V. Patriarche, Mrs. L. M. Smallwood and Mrs. B. Murgatroyd. Working in the kitchen were Mrs. D. Mitchell, Mrs. H. Duff, Mrs. M. Stubbs and Mrs. D. D. LaTouche. Miss D. Lucas was in charge of decorations and tea tickets were handled by Mrs. J. F. K. English, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Hall and Mrs. S. R. Richardson.

A variety of games and contests added zest to the afternoon. These were arranged by Dr. English and members of the men's committee.

In charge of the various stalls were: Home cooking, Mrs. T. H. Evans, Mrs. E. Lawrence, Miss K. Jaffray; Mrs. R. W. Cornish and Mrs. H. M. Burleigh; knitted goods, Mrs. Frank Bass and Mrs. H. Caswell; aprons, Mrs. A. Mayfield and Mrs. George Gilbert; gifts and novelties, Mrs. M. H. Barry and Mrs. G. Schofield; plants and flowers, Miss M. Lettice, Mrs. A. G. Gosling, Mrs. P. Porter, Miss M. Wilton and Miss J. Thompson; superfluities, Miss Alison Chrow and Miss C. Chrow; artists' corner, Mrs. P. M. Robinson; candy and cookies, Miss Shirley Humphries and Miss Gwynedd Hughes.

The successful affair realized proceeds of approximately $1,000.

"Grudge" Co-op

SPALDING, England (CP)—Mrs. Lian Hardy is a farmer's wife with a grudge against the profit-making middleman, because she says cabbages she sells at five cents a dozen are retailed at 10 cents each. She plans to form a co-operative with other Lincolnshire growers and sell directly to the public.

BRIDGE LESSON

By JACOBY AND SON

Oswald: "Here is an example of bidding at its best. There are any number of ways to get to six diamonds but when the hand was played at the Valley View Studio in Dallas less than half the pairs reached the slam while the others settled for bidding three no-trump and making five."

Jim: "I'm going to comment on all the bidding. The opening heart bid and two diamond response are standard. So is North's immediate diamond raise but I am afraid that those pairs that missed the slam did so because North decided to rebid his five-card heart suit instead of raising his partner's diamonds. After that immediate raise South was very slam-minded. He might have gone the Blackwood route but he decided to show his ace of spades. North went to three no-trump. He did not know if his partner was aiming for no-trump or a diamond slam but he did have a club stopper. When South took out the no-trump into four diamonds, North knew that South was heading for a slam and showed his ace of clubs."

Oswald: "South might have tried for seven but he remembered that North had merely bid three no-trump at his previous turn to bid so South settled for the small slam."

Jim: "It is interesting to note that North never bothered to rebid his five-card heart suit. Instead he chose to raise diamonds, bid three no-trump and cue-bid his ace of clubs."

Oswald: "There were lost of ways to play the hand also. South decided to duck the first spade. He won the second. Played two rounds of trumps and ruffed a spade. He came back to his hand with the king of clubs, drew the last trump and claimed the balance."

DO YOU NEED A NEW INTEREST

Here's an intriguing opportunity for you. One acre of land and four cement block buildings all set up with heating plant and cooler for mushroom production. The land and buildings are worth more than the asking price. A terrific potential is here for an enterprising couple or family. If you are not happy later on then you can sell and get your money back — OR build a home and use the buildings for animals. — OR use the property for purely storage purposes. There's a very lucrative business waiting here for someone and it's all a bargain at the asking price of $12,000. (Replacement cost would be $20,000 at least? Interested? Call Mr. Yells, 382-2101. Andy Stephen Looks at TV

Garry Moore returns to the television wars in the fall in a new comedy-variety series in color.

Stephen

As a result, he is gathering up a stable of some very qualified writers to provide him with the words to join whatever action he plans to carry on his weekly stint.

Writers are not generally as well known as the stars themselves unless they are a Tennessee Williams or an Arthur Miller. Nonetheless, they are a most important ingredient to any successful performance.

The new writers joining Moore's writing staff are Sheldon Keller, George Foster and Bob Booker.

The team joins Gary Belkin, Art Baer and Ben Joelson, assigned earlier to the series.

The names mean very little, but the credits speak for themselves.

Keller won an Emmy this year for his work on "An Evening With Carol Channing." His credits also include "Sinatra—a Man and His Music," and another Frank Sinatra special to be released next season.

Keller has also written for The Danny Kaye Show, The Dinah Shore Show, The Sid Caesar Hour and has done an Art Carney special.

Foster and Booker wrote and produced the comedy album, "When You're in Love the Whole World Is Jewish." They produced a motion picture comedy, Pardon Me, Sir, But Is My Eye Hurting Your Elbow? to be released shortly.

Foster, a radio and television writer for the past 16 years, has won a Peabody Award, Christopher and Sylvania Awards and four Emmy nominations. He spent four years writing for The Perry Como Show and has worked with Bing Crosby, Arthur Godfrey, Johnny Carson, Milton Berle, Fred Allen and Tallulah Bankhead.

Booker has been in radio and television for 18 years as a writer, producer, director and performer. He is a writer of special material, producer of night club shows and winner of major awards in the record industry, including the Grammy.

Their credentials are powerful and Moore is lucky to have them on his side. He is going to need all the help he can get because his show has been slipped into what is regarded as a death slot by many.

CBS-TV has The Garry Moore Show booked into the Sunday 9:00-10:00 period opposite NBC-TV's Bonanza, which has reigned the rating roost for so many years it's hard to remember.

UPLANDS SPECIAL

Mom and Dad, just rattle around in this lovely, mature, solid, immaculate and charming FAMILY home. Through the porticoed entrance, one is surrounded by a combination of the best of the older and the new. The foyer is both spacious and inviting with a roomy fireplaced DEN to the left, a powder room to the right. After a stop to admire the decor and design one can enter either the entertainment-size living room and sunroom, or the guest dining room, both decorated with excellent taste. You will be thrilled with the modern Delft decorated cabinet kitchen and nook, and the gracious open staircase to four large and individual bedrooms and baths. The master bedroom is en-suite, with powder room and 4-piece bath, and a sunroom all its own for early evening relaxation. In the full basement are two semi-finished rooms, storage area, a full bathroom, and an economical hot water heating plant. All this in a stone home built to last forever and surrounded by a lovely, sprinkler serviced, semi-formal secluded garden. Not often are such homes available, and never at a more practical price!

Majority Vote Urged as Answer To Jury Tampering in Britain

By JIM ANDERSON

LONDON (CP) — Is the jury system, after 750 years as the keystone of British justice, still relevant to modern law in a day of increasing technical evidence and complicated issues?

Some people here say it has outlived its usefulness and should be dropped. Others would keep it but urge major reforms.

The debate over juries has been intensified by Britain's growing problem of organized crime, which some believe has brought serious jury tampering in its wake.

Police chiefs, concerned with the crime rate and the difficulty of getting convictions, have been leading spokesmen for changes.

Several chief constables have urged a majority vote by juries, instead of the unanimous verdict rule, under which one stubborn juryman can force a new trial.

The chief constables of England and Wales collected figures on last year's jury trials and recently published a report that 39 per cent of those who pleaded not guilty were acquitted.

But many lawyers discount the chiefs' statistics. They say the over-all figure of 12 per cent acquittals whether the accused pleads guilty or innocent is the one that should be considered, and add that the acquittal rate is lower for serious crimes.

The lord chief justice, Lord Parker, joined the debate last week and told the graduating class at a police college that the figures showed far too many people were being acquitted, largely because of the jury system. He estimated that three-quarters of those acquitted were guilty.

On a BBC television discussion this month, two prominent lawyers both urged changes.

Louis Blom-Cooper said juries should be abolished and trials held with just a judge.

LACK QUALIFICATIONS

He argued that most jurors lack the education and qualifications to decide legal points.

David Napley said judges tend to become too case-hardened and the jury brings an element of basic common sense to the trial.

But he proposed sweeping changes in the system.

He suggested juries should not be asked for general verdicts guilty or not guilty but should rule on specific questions put to them by the judge, who would then apply the law to their findings.

The judge should also instruct the jury on how to interpret conflicting expert testimony, the way he now instructs it on points of law, Napley said.

JURORS BRIBED

Lord Parker Monday expanded his remarks about jury tampering from the bench. Refusing the appeal of a man convicted for conspiracy to rob a bank, he said it looked as though four others in the case had got off because a juror had been bribed.

One jury was discharged because of jury tampering and attempts were made to bribe three members of the second jury.

Scotland Yard has a special squad dealing with organized crime and, after the lord chief justice's remarks, it is expected to pay special attention to jury tampering.

Some less sweeping changes in the law are in the works. The government says it is preparing legislation based on a year-old report on jury service, which recommended dropping property qualifications for jurors.

Shirley's Fish Fry Draws Expert Raves

When Shirley Fry's around there's usually something fishy going on.

And most likely it's going on canvas.

Shirley, housewife-cum-artist, has just completed 103 color wash paintings of fish to be found in local waters.

The former Bermuda advertising manager paints her fish the hard way from what she sees through her diving goggles under water.

PAYS OFF

And it pays off. A marine expert described her work as among the most authentic he had seen.

Now showing in The Bay's Douglas Room, the paintings feature not only the fish, but the natural environment in which they would most likely be found.

To achieve this, Shirley pored through endless books on marine life in addition to going down to see for herself.

A fromer Vancouver girl, she lives with husband Jack, at 1193 Goldstream Avenue.

DOCTOR URGES

Permits Required Before Having Baby

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gynecologist Dr. Jack Peck of Vancouver said Tuesday parents should be required to have a permit before being allowed to have children.

* * *

Dr. Peck, a resident of Vancouver General Hospital and on the staff on Vancouver's Family Planning Clinic, said he agrees entirely with comments on birth control made here Monday by Dr. C. F. Bentley of the University of Alberta.

* * *

Dr. Bentley, dean of agriculture, said in a speech here parenthood should be denied some people.

Dr. Peck said Canadians would be up in arms over his suggestion that permits be required before couples are allowed to have children — "they like to breed like flies."

He said when the population explosion "is really upon us" a young man might be told:

"All right, you can have children if you marry a smarter girl than the one you have in mind right now."

Dr. Bentley said parenthood should be denied to people on mental, moral, or genetic grounds and to couples who have been on welfare for years or who have produced children after receiving birth control information.

Rites Held For Welfare Employee

Pastor Arthur Spenst of Victoria Seventh-Day Adventist Church conducted services in McCall's funeral home recently for Ronald Ottway Berry of the city welfare department.

Mr. Berry died last week at the age of 55 following a heart attack.

Mr. Berry was born in Vernon. He moved to England in 1930 and stayed until 1945. On his return to B.C. he became welfare administrator of Surrey for five years, then worked as an estimator at Vancouver Iron Works.

Moving to Victoria in 1955, he spent five years as chief estimator at Victoria Machinery Depot. Later he joined city welfare and spent six years in the old-age security, blind and disablity pensions departments.

Mr. Berry was a member of Victoria Seventh-Day Adventist Church and was active in church and community affairs. He is survived by the widow, Phyllis, at 806 Lily, and a son, Tony, at 916 Monterey.

Drug Sentences

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four men were sentenced in magistrate's court Tuesday on charges of possession of heroin. Jacob Heibert, 24, got three years; Clarence Brown, 40, got two years less a day; John Ross, 30, and James Mandelscu, 27, each received one year sentences.

Prospective Foster Parents To Hear Experts

Two Victoria couples who have cared for 44 foster children between them will discuss their experiences with prospective foster parents next week.

A meting will be held July 7 at 8 p.m. at Spencerhouse, 1951 Cook St.

One set of foster parents have looked after 32 foster children, besides their own three youngsers, and at present are caring for two babies.

A second couple in the city has had 12 youngsters in their home in the past three years, and right now counts four, including two teen-agers, in their family.

Any persons interested in becoming foster parents are invited to attend the meeting.

Open Dancing Set at Square

There will be public dancing around the fountains in Centennial Square starting at 8 p.m. tonight.

This is the first of a series of Wednesday night dances, promoted by Greater Victoria Centennial Society, which will run through July and August.

The Talismen, described as "a sweet and exciting" orchestra, will play for dancing. The instrumentalists are Frank Keifer, leader and guitarist; Ken Oliphant, organist and pianist; Stuart McIntosh, bass, and Mike Peters, drummer.

Topless Ban

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — City commission has passed an ordinance prohibiting topless entertainers or waitresses. The ordinance forbids "an entertainer, employer, patron or any other person to appear in . . . businesses, naked or in indicent attire or lewd dress or to make any indecent or obscene exposure of his or her person."

Body Recovered

GOLDEN, B.C. (CP) — The body of a 24-year-old Polish immigrant was found in the Columbia River, five miles west of here Tuesday. The man had been missing since Friday. His name was not released.

VICTORIA KIWANIANS went on a guided tour Tuesday of the Chinese Temple on Fisgard Street. The ornately carved wooden shrines, constructed without nails, were first brought to the city in 1885. The tour followed a banquet of Chinese food and was conducted by Sun Lock proprietor Jack Lee.

Hospital Not Guilty Of Negligence: Court

OTTAWA (CP) — The University Hospital Board of Edmonton and staff doctor George Monckton were not guilty of negligence in connection with injuries suffered by a hospital patient, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled Tuesday.

Gerald Lepine, then a 26-year-old resident of Fort Providence, N.W.T., leaped through a fourth-storey window of the hospital in July, 1962. He had been admitted earlier for treatment of epilepsy.

". . . Lepine's sudden leap through the window was not an event which a reasonable man would have foreseen and have been required to take more precautions than were available in this case," said Mr. Justice Emmett Hall who wrote the unanimous judgment.

NEGLIGENT

An action against Dr. Monckton was dismissed at trial but damages were awarded against the hospital. The Alberta appeal court found both guilty of negligence and said round-the-clock care was needed for Mr. Lepine who suffers from a severe form of epilepsy.

"Short of having put Lepine in some restraining device or of keeping him at ground level, both of which were rejected by the appeal court as being necessary or required, the injuries sustained by Lepine were the result of an impulse on his part which could not reasonably have been foreseen," said the Supreme Court judgment.

"To hold otherwise would . . . make doctors and hospitals insurers against all such hazards, which they are not."

Talks Set On Sport Facilities

Saanich council will hold a series of informal private meetings to discuss sports facilities in the municipality.

Reeve Hugh Curtis said the purpose is to discuss the subject privately with department heads and assess information. The same procedure was followed in drafting last year's capital projects budget.

At the same time, he added, the parks and recreation committee will be open for briefs and submissions by anyone interested in the subject.

The two main proposals made to date are for separate small ice sheets and one larger and centralized sports and recreation centre.

Who Can Believe Tales of Torture?

By WALTER C. ALVEREZ

I just found on my doorstep a big folder of antivivisection literature filled with the usual accusations of brutalities daily committed by medical researchers on supposedly unanesthetized animals.

And suddenly, the question came tearing through my mind, "How can intelligent people believe such ravings? How can they possibly believe that hundreds of the finest and most honored men in America spend their days torturing animals? To me, this sounds just about as reasonable as it would be to accuse all ministers of the Gospel or all bankers or all distinguished university professors of torturing their house pets to death. If any man were to bring me a booklet filled with such accusations against distinguished university teachers, I would have to say, "I just cannot believe such a thing."

Alvarez

Actually, the people who now believe that most researchers are sadistic brutes would, I think, be staggered a bit if they were to go through a few laboratories and see that much of the work is being done, not by monsters with black beards but by young women.

LITTLE ETHER

I wish all people who read this would stop and ask themselves, "If I had to operate on a dog, would I insist on working on a howling, struggling and biting animal, when with the help of a little ether I could have him sound asleep and free from pain? "Obviously, no sane man would fail to give the ether and that is perhaps the best answer I can give to the whole antivivisection literature.

Actually, in all my many years of life in laboratories, I never saw any cruelty to animals. I would have had the man instantly dismissed if I had seen any such thing. Antivivisectionists have always said to me, "But after an operation, an animal must suffer unspeakable pain."

I doubt it, because after I had a big operation, I had no pain except when I coughed or hiccupped, and then it was just a jab. In many cases, after an operation or an experiment, the animal is given an overdose of chloroform and never wakes' he never feels the slightest pain.

ATTACKING

During my 11 years in a big research laboratory of the University of California, my chief and I used to beg the antivivisectionists, who were constantly attacking us, to come in any day, unannounced, and walk through the place — but in those many years only one came — the president — and she came only because she was brought by the chairman of our board of supervisors, who wanted to see if there was any truth back of her constant accusations.

He found none. Because in the course of years the woman and I had come to be friendly enemies she admitted to me that in order to keep up her firm belief that we doctors spent our days torturing dogs, she did not want to run any chances of finding it was not true.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Ricky Bolton, age 13, of Peterborough, Ont., Canada, for his question:

What is the meaning of K in temperature?

F stands for Gabriel Fahrenheit, who invented the mercury thermometer; C stands either centigrade or for Anders Celsius, the name of a Swedish astronomer; K stands for Lord Kelvin, a British physicist of the 19th century.

Fahrenheit, centigrade and Kelvin are three different scales for measuring degrees of temperature. all three ean be used to measure the difference between the freezing and boiling points of water. On the Fahrenheit scale water freezes at 32 degrees and boils at 112 degrees. It freezes at 0 degrees and boils at 100 degrees centigrade. On the Kelvin scale the freezing point of water is 273, and its boiling point is 373 degrees.

Naturally the freezing and boiling points of water do not vary. The three scales are merely different systems for measuring amounts of temperature in degrees. Water freezes at 32 degrees F, 0 degrees C, or 273 regrees K. And 112 F, 100-C and 373 K are different readings of the exact same temperature at which water comes to a boil. Temperatures below zero are read in minus degrees, and the zero, or 0 point, on each scale is of vital importance.

Lose Last Degree of Heat

On the Fahrenheit scale, 0 is 32 degrees colder than the freezing point of water, the same temperature as 0 degrees centigrade. On the Kelvin scale, 0 is 273 degrees colder than the temperature at which water becomes ice. This is the temperature of absolute zero, at which any substance has lost all its heat and can get no colder. The Kelvin scale, named for its inventor, also is known as the absolute scale because its zero is based on absolute zero.

There are 80 equal Fahrenheit degrees between the freezing and boiling points of water and 100 centigrade degrees. Each Fahrenheit degree is equal to five-ninths of 1 centigrade degree. There are 100 k degrees between freezing and boiling water, which means that 1 k degree equals 1 C degree. There are, however, no minus degrees on the Kelvin scale for no substance can be colder than 0 K degrees.

Like any other temperature, absolute zero can be read on all three scales. On the centigrade scale, minus 273 degrees is the point at which all molecules come to a complete standstill and all substances lose their last degree of heat. On the Fahrenheit scale the absolute zero of heatlessness is minus 460 degrees.

Fire, Police Link Scored By U.S. Chief

The president of the International Association of Firefighters said Tuesday comments from an Esquimalt councillor and union member "present a most unusual situation."

William Buck of Washington, D.C., who came here to review the local situation after a speaking engagement in Vancouver, said:

"A councillor, who is a member of the international, has taken a postion contrary to our established policy.

"This policy is in firm opposition to the consolidation of fire and police departments.

"It is our experience, where consolidation exists, it does not provide the high degree of fire and police protection that the citizens are rightfully entitled to have.

"We are confident that the municipal council and the citizens will take appropriate action when all the facts and reports are brought to the public's attention."

FIRE COMMITTEE

The president's comments concerned coun. Arthur Mebs, defence department chief fire inspector and a member of Esquimalt's fire committee.

He said earlier he favors release of a report which considers the separation of the joint fire-police force but in view of low fire losses and the presence of the navy fire brigade in the event of a major one, it was "rather silly" to think of setting up a separate fire force.

Rites Held For City Nurse

A funeral service was held at Hayward's funeral home today for Dorothy Margaret Mobley, 69, popular Victoria nurse, who died in St. Joseph's Hospital Monday.

Mrs. Mobley, of 917 Dale Street, was head nurse at the T. Eaton Company store here from 1948 to 1956 and for the past 10 years was a nurse at the Chinese Hospital, 555 Herald Street.

Born at Renfrew, Ont., she was raised in Victoria and graduated from Vancouver General Hospital School of Nursing in 1919.

Mrs. Mobley is survived by three brothers and two sisters, Norman and John Taylor of Victoria; Douglas of Vancouver; Mrs. Marjorie Sotham of Victoria and Mrs. Susan Harlin of Teslin, Yukon Territory.

Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley officiated at this afternoon's funeral service. It was requested that, in lieu of flowers, donations be sent to the Rehabilitation Foundation of British Columbia, 780 Vernon Street, Victoria.

'Buy Farms To Preserve Greenbelts'

Government action to preserve farmlands for use as greenbelts has been requested by the Albert Head Ratepayers' Association.

Ratepayers want the government to buy farmlands, if necessary, to prevent subdivision.

The government could lease the land back at a low rate.

'LOST CAUSE'

"I don't like to see farms broken up for subdivisions, but usually the only money a farmer sees from his land is when it is subdivided," said James Chidlow, president of the Metchosin Farmers' Institute.

"Farming is getting to be a lost cause here," he added. "You have to have a big operation and have a lot of money behind you."

All Police Work As Holiday Starts

More than 100 Canadians are expected to die on the country's roads over the long weekend.

But commanding officer of B.C. RCMP F. S. Spalding has announced police surveillance of the province's highways will be reinforced to curtail B.C.'s death toll.

Radar installations and patrol cars, both marked and unmarked, will be used in full force, he said.

"The law will be strictly enforced against the reckless and the flagrant violator," said Assistant Commissioner Spalding.

"Our prime concern, however, is to assist the travelling public wherever possible and to ensure the safe and proper use of the highways."

Attorney-General Robert Bonner in a similar statement of police plans for the busy weekend said the object of the increased surveillance is "to heighten public awareness of road safety.

He said all police leaves, both of the provincial and municipal forces, have been cancelled.

'ARMY' NEAR FUND GOAL OF $63,000

Less than $500 short of the $63,000 goal, the Salvation Army's annual fund drive will close at the end of the month.

Total amount collected so far is $62,530.

"With just a couple of days left, we're hopeful we can reach it" said a spokesman this morning.

Donations are being received at Salvation Army offices, 769 Pandora.

Gorge Polluted From Harbor?

Pollution from the Inner Harbor is partly responsible for the deteriorating condition of Gorge waterway, a federal marine biologist said Tuesday.

The disclosure by Dr. Michael Waldichuk, chief officer of the Fisheries Research Board in Nanaimo, conflicts directly with findings of a provincial health department survey in 1958.

Dr. Waldichuk was reporting to Portage Inlet and Gorge Waterway Association — a group set up a year ago to try to clean up the waterway — on findings of a crew from the federal research agency following a 10-month intensive study of the problem.

In addition to reporting on the different causes of pollution, Dr. Waldichuk informed the meeting that the two bodies of water are in the process of becoming an inland lake.

He said any blockage at the mouth of the Gorge would bring about this phenomenon, although it will likely take thousands of years.

Meanwhile, one method of partially cleaning up the Gorge would be dredging to remove the abundance of eel grass — an event which would probably affect the abundance of algae species near the surface.

MILITARY coup in Argentina resulted in the resignation Tuesday in Washington of that country's ambassador to the United States, Norberto M. Barrenechea. (AP Wirephoto)

Ex-Army Chief New Leader Of Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—Retired Lt.-Gen. Juan Carlos Ongania, former army commander-in-chief, was sworn in as president of Argentina at a ceremony in Government House today.

His inauguration followed Tuesday's overthrow in a bloodless military coup of elected President Arturo Illia's 32-month-old administration.

After taking the oath of office at Government House in central Buenos Aires, the 52-year-old Ongania—a tough anti-Communist and anti-Peronist—was expected to proclaim a "revolutionary statute" granting him and his new regime full government powers.

He was expected to replace the constitution used by Illia.

Observers believed Ongania also would adopt a tough stand against the rise of support for ousted dictator Juan Peron.

DISSOLVE CONGRESS

The coup leaders headed by Gen. Pascual Pistarini, commander-in-chief of the army, stripped the Supreme Court judges of their authority, disbanded political parties and dissolved congress Tuesday. This opened the way to a situation that could be similar to that in Brazil where President Humberto Castelo Branco gave himself sweeping powers.

Ongania, who in the past said he did not want to be president, stayed behind the scenes Tuesday as his friend and successor at the top army job, Pistarini, smoothly toppled Illia's regime.

In the capital, life continued normally with all stores, offices and banks doing business as usual. In cafes, the talk was of the coup. There were no reports of any arrests.

So far the only overt opposition to the new regime has been from Buenos Aires University, alleged by the military to be a leading Communist centre.

'Feeding Hungry Tiger'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Chang Chi - yun, former Nationalist Chinese cabinet minister, said Tuesday night that Canada's wheat sales to Communist China are helping feed a hungry tiger which one day might devour the free nations.

Dr. Chang is here leading an 11-man delegation of the Chinese National Defence Research Council and said his group is on a political, economic and military mission through South Korea, Japan, Canada and the United States. The delegation includes two generals, university professors and government vice-ministers.

In an interview Dr. Chang said: "It is unwise to feed a hungry tiger. When he is well fed he will be a danger to the free nations."

He felt it was wrong for Canada to trade with Communist China. The real China, he said, was the free Chinese on Taiwan. Those on the mainland were controlled by a puppet government.

The former nationalist Chinese minister of education felt that the western nations were not doing enough to help his country's cause. Nationalist China needed more material aid and moral encouragements.

The party will visit the National Research Council in Ottawa and later go to Washington.

Electricians Accept Offer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thirty-nine Vancouver electricians have voted unanimously to accept a 6.2 per cent pay increase, ending a threat of another civic strike here.

The electricians, members of the Electrical Workers Union, had previously turned down a majority conciliation board recommendation for a 5.65 per cent wage increase, the same figure recommended by boards in the outside and inside workers' disputes.

Negotiations with the city resumed after the electricians voted for a strike. Their present rate is $3.56 an hour.

GOLD TOWN

Holiday Exodus At Hand

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Forbes

This is the weekend that Victorians take to the road. Cars are already being packed and trailers are being readied. Maps have been studied and routes well marked. Tomorrow evening and early Friday the great exodus begins!

Some families will move to summer homes on lakes and at seashores not too distant from home.

Others will go up-island to favorite resorts where cabins have been reserved and waiting for weeks—perhaps since the last July holiday season.

Still others will travel the highways of our province, north and east, to see something of their heritage as British Columbians.

Those who head north on the Cariboo Highway from Cache Creek will no doubt have as their goal the restored mining town of Barkerville that, Friday, comes back to rip-roaring life for the summer season.

More than 100 years ago this gold-strike town was the most important place north of San Francisco, ranking higher than Victoria, and with a larger population. When the gold fever was over, it was left a derelict with only memories to sustain those who remained in its wooden houses and buildings.

* * *

A few years ago, as part of a program to preserve the early history of the province, the government began restoration of the old town.

Today, the one long street that runs close to Williams Creek has again all the appearance of gold-rush days. This street starts at the original wooden building that houses St. Saviour's Anglican Church. It stood in Barkerville in those days when gold was being gouged by the bucketful from the banks and sidehills along the creeks.

At the other end, where the trail starts up to the Richfield courthouse, there is a saloon.

In between is Bowron House with a piano that was packed in over the trail on the backs of six men in the 1860s; Moses' barber shop where bearded miners, dance hall and hurdy-gurdy girls were clients; Wake-Up Jake's eating house, the famed Kelly Hotel and the historic mine workings with the shaft where Billy Barker found "the richest pay dirt anyone had ever seen" and so started the town on its way.

* * *

The gold commissioner's office and the Masonic Temple have been restored and the Chinese gambling and opium smoking houses. Barnard's Express office is there, also Johnny Butt's carpenter shop and Sandy McArthur's blacksmith's shed.

In most of these restorations, wax figures of the original owners, authentically dressed and in the settings of those far-away days, add historic interest.

During the winter and early spring, the long street that meanders up the hill is quiet and it sees relatively few visitors. But from now until Labor Day, it becomes a rollicking thoroughfare with thousands of tourists stamping up and down its wooden sidewalks and hard-packed dirt road.

Stage coaches take off from the Barnard Express Office to circle the town; Wake-Up Jake's offers real baked beans (cooked a full day before serving) with baking powder biscuits and homemade lemon pie on the side.

* * *

Sourdough bread and bannock are sold in the little bakery and there's barley sugar, hoarhound balls and chocolate drops in the sweet shop.

Sir Matthew Baillie Begbie, first judge in British Columbia, holds daily court in the old building on the hill and in the Theatre Royal, men and women in the dress of a hundred years ago, present a robust, rib-tickling show, twice daily.

The saloons are open too—only it's root beer and sarsparilla that is sold now. And down by the old Cornish water wheel and flume that once recovered thousands of dollars of "pay dirt" visitors do their own panning for gold.

Only modern touch is the picnic site, camp grounds and the museum building that were included in the restoration project.

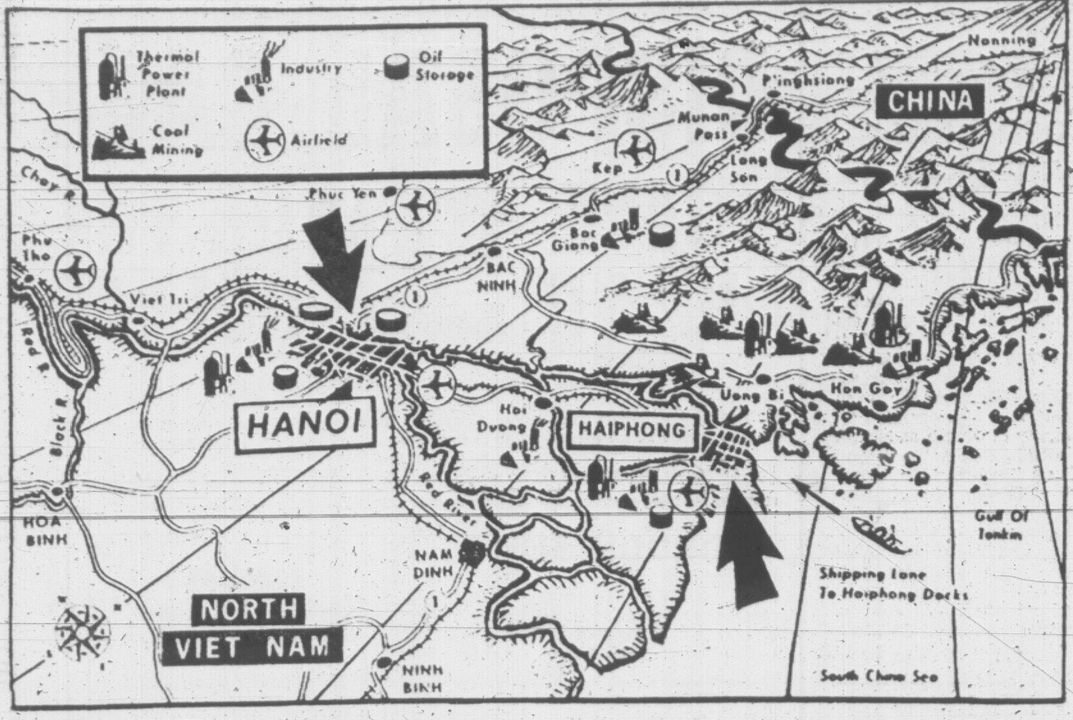
Hanoi Oil Depots Bombed



STRATEGIC OIL SUPPLY DEPOTS in North Viet Nam hit today by U.S. bombers are shown in drawing. Air force jets bombed storage tanks three miles from the centre of Hanoi, North Viet Nam capital, while navy planes struck fuel areas 50 miles to the east of the port city of Haiphong. The Red China border is about 100 miles from Hanoi. (AP Wirephoto).

Heavy Damage Reported

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. jet planes set raging fires with bombs and rockets today in previously-immune fuel depots of Hanoi and Haiphong, representing about 60 per cent of North Viet Nam's strategic oil supply. World reaction boiled up while smoke still soared above the flames.

One target area of the raids, which pilots described as highly successful, was three miles from the centre of Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital. The other was in the dock area of Haiphong, two miles from the heart of that major port.

The U.S. Air Force announced one plane, an F-105 Thunderchief fighter-bomber fell in the attack and the pilot was missing. Radio Hanoi said seven planes were shot down.

In Washington, U.S. Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara told a press conference one aim was to make North Viet Nam's infiltration of South Viet Nam more costly; another was to save the lives of Americans and their allies fighting in South Viet Nam.

McNamara said there was aerial opposition outside Hanoi and one enemy MiG fighter plane was possibly destroyed. He reported an estimate of 80 per cent destruction of facilities in the Haiphong strike and heavy damage in the Hanoi area.

SMOKE RISES 35,000 FEET

A Saigon spokesman said smoke rose 35,000 feet from the fuel tanks near Hanoi and 20,000 feet from the Haiphong tanks.

A communique said the two fuel depots were vital to the support of "the mounting North Vietnamese aggression" against South Viet Nam, and the attack was "consistent with our continuing policy of bombing only military targets in North Viet Nam."

The previous closest attacks were on missile sites 15 miles from Hanoi and 10 miles from Haiphong.

HIT BRIDGES TOO

The spokesman said attacks Tuesday also destroyed two major bridges 27 miles northwest and 35 miles north of Hanoi. Both bridges are on supply lines linking with China.

The 38-tank storage area hit at Haiphong was said to have 72,000 metric tons of fuel, comprising 40 per cent of North Viet Nam's fuel capacity. The spokesman said 95 per cent of all the fuel going into the country moves through the depot.

Although the Hanoi target was three miles from the centre of the city, the spokesman said it was in the countryside with no sizable density of population around it.

It included 32 fuel storage tanks capable of holding 34,000 metric tons of fuel, or about 20 per cent of North Viet Nam's fuel storage capacity, he added.

The communique said:

"As compared with 1965 averages, truck movements from North to South Viet Nam during the first five months of 1966 hav doubled. Daily tonnages of supplies moved into the south have increased 150 per cent.

"Infiltration of men has increased 120 per cent. To maintain this sharply increased rate of infiltration, North Vietnamese oil imports so far this year are 50 to 70 per cent higher than in 1965."

Destruction of the Haiphong and Hanoi facilities "will make infiltration of men and supplies into South Viet Nam more costly and more difficult."

OTHER ACTION LIGHT

The air offensive in the North, now in its 16th month, completely dominated the U.S. command's daily war report. In South Viet Nam, where thousands of U.S. troops are in the field searching for the enemy, "only very light and scattered, minor contacts" were reported.

On the political front, the threat of a Buddhist boycott of South Viet Nam's September

WANTS EXPLANATION

U.K. Regrets Action

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Wilson expressed regret over today's U.S. bombing of oil depots near Hanoi and said Britain is unable to support the action.

An announcement of the prime minister's view on the U.S. bombing of fuel targets three miles from Hanoi and two miles from the Port of Haiphong was made after Wilson had requested urgent clarification from Washington of reasons for the raids.

The White House in Washington declined comment on Wilson's statement.

"We have made it clear on many occasions that we cannot support an extension of the bombing to such areas," Wilson said.

DIFFICULT TO ASSESS

"Her Majesty's government have noted with regret that U.S. aircraft have attacked North Vietnamese targets touching on the populated areas of Hanoi and Haiphong. It is difficult for the British government, which is not involved in the fighting in Viet Nam, to assess the importance of any particular action which the U.S. government regards as militarily necessary in this conflict.

"Nevertheless, we have made it clear on many occasions that we cannot support an extension of the bombing in such areas, even though we were confident that the U.S. forces would take every precaution, as always, to avoid civilian casualties.

"We believe that the value of each application of force must be judged not merely in terms of the military need . . . but also in terms of the additional suffering and distress which it inflicts upon innocent people . . .

"The opportunity for bringing all the fighting in Viet Nam to an end is open to Hanoi and the onus for continuing it rests there also."

'NEGOTIATION PATH MUCH MORE DIFFICULT'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said today the bombing of North Viet Nam oil depots indicates a new stage in the war and "will make the road to the negotiating table that much more difficult."

"I think also it will bring about greater amounts of aid from the Soviet Union and Peking," the Montana senator told reporters who asked whether he approved the action.

Mansfield said the destruction of the petroleum facilities "will not deter infiltration" of North Vietnamese into South Viet Nam, although he said it may slow it for the time being.

He said he thinks the end result may be increased infiltration.

Chairman J. William Fulbright (Dem.—Ark.) of the Senate foreign relations committee said of the bombings: "I regret it because I think it will make more difficult negotiations for any kind of compromise settlement."

Fulbright declined to speculate as to whether the action might bring Communist China into the Vietnamese conflict, but said it was "a step in that direction."

RUSSIA CHARGES:

'U.S. in Blind Rage At Own Helplessness'

MOSCOW (AP)—Moscow radio called the U.S. air raids near Hanoi and Haiphong today a "new dangerous step by the U.S. ruling circles in expanding aggression against the Vietnamese people."

"Contrary to all the lessons of history," it said on its domestic service, "the U.S. government is resorting to banditry and force in blind rage at the knowledge of its own helplessness.

"The latest act of international piracy . . . serves as an open challenge to all countries favoring the immediate cessation of U.S. aggression in Viet Nam. The world public has received with rage and disgust the news of Washington's latest senseless act which will further exacerbate international tension.

"Ties of fraternal friendship and militant solidarity link the Soviet and Vietnamese peoples. Our country and t hoh teer-oS Our country and the other Socialist states are providing, and will continue to provide, the necessary aid in the just struggle of the Vietnamese people."

CARPENTERS SEND NOTICE FOR STRIKE

(See Page 18)

Strike notice expiring July 1 is being sent today to nearly 300 independent contractors in B.C. by the carpenters union.

The move follows an 87 per cent vote among about 3,000 carpenters favoring strike action.

About 270 contractors who bargain as one unit with another 3,500 carpenters have requested a government-supervised vote, now beginning to be taken.

A union spokesman said about 15 contractors in Victoria are affected. He declined to say whether, at the end of the holiday weekend, the carpenters will strike.

PROMINENT local sportsman Oliver Goldsmith was killed late Tuesday when the boom of a crane collapsed at Victoria Machinery Depot. He was working on the float of the crane which at the time was lifting a 45-ton section of the oil rig being built at VMD. (See Pages 14 and 21.)

Ottawa Dinner Guests Stunned

RUSSIAN SPARKS VERBAL SLUGFEST

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Ranking Soviet Deputy Dimitry Polyansky last night used Canada as the battleground to charge the United States with the sole responsibility for ending the war in Viet Nam.

Polyansky, the most senior Russian official to visit Canada, unleashed his broadside in a nose-to-nose confrontation with External Affairs Minister Paul Martin as the latter was bidding him farewell at the end of an official dinner party.

The scene was the venerable 100-year-old Rideau Club across from Parliament Hill where Polyansky had shaken Canadian parliamentarians with an attack against the United States in his after-dinner speech.

At the top of the stairs, with an interpreter wedged in between, he told Martin the United States had started the Viet Nam war and must end it.

"What is required is not mediation," he declared.

Polyansky had initially been operating from a prepared text.

SEES VICTIM

He told some 150 dinner guests on his last night in Ottawa that it was quite obvious who was the victim and the aggressor in Viet Nam.

"The United States entered another man's house," said Polyansky. "It was not Viet Nam which attacked the United States but the United States attacked Vietnamese cities, roads and villages, and poisoned their crops and destroyed their forests."

"Not one single Vietnamese bomb has killed or maimed one United States man, woman or child."

In remarks which were interspersed with uncertain boos from the Canadians, the Soviet deputy said all people everywhere must work to end the war so the Vietnamese people would have the chance to decide their own internal affairs.

SOVIET INSISTS:

We'll Never Accept Bonn Nuclear Force

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN

OTTAWA—The Soviet Union will never, under any circumstances, accept a West Germany armed with nuclear weapons, according to one of the leading spokesmen of the U.S.S.R.

In a hard-hitting speech that took Canadian officials by surprise, Soviet First Deputy Dimitry Polyansky said the apparent tranquility in Europe was concealing a far from happy situation.

"It appears tranquil," he told an official dinner hosted by External Affairs Minister Paul Martin.

"The soldiers are in their barracks, and not in the trenches."

But he asked if this external peace was not "hiding gathering storm clouds."

The Soviet Union was not oversimplifying the situation in Western Europe, he said.

UNDER HITLER

"We are not trying to draw an equation between what is happening in West Germany today and what went on under Hitler."

But fact has decreed that there are now two states in Germany and the eastern portion is a socialist state seeking peace with all countries, Polyansky said.

Certain circles in West Germany were not happy with recent developments and opposed agreements made by anti-Hitler elements, he contended.

"The thirst for revenge is encouraging the government and some of the generals to

British Seamen Accept Strike Settlement Offer

LONDON (AP) — Britain's 45-day seamen's strike was settled today.

The executive of the National Seamen's Union voted 29 to 16 to call off the strike after meeting all morning at their south London headquarters.

The decision followed by less than 24 hours a charge in the House of Commons by Prime Minister Wilson that Communists were pressuring the seamen to prolong the dispute for political motives.

The vote of the union leadership indicated that a hard core of militants were still holding out for better terms but had been beaten down by the moderate element.

When the end of the strike was announced, there were angry demonstrations outside union headquarters.

"The initial reaction in shipping circles is one of relief," said a spokesman for the shipping federation.

The seamen went on strike for a 40-hour week.

ACCEPT FINAL OFFER

The shipowners' final offer of a cut in the working week to 48 hours—with 40 hours promised next year—was accepted along with 48 days annual vacation, four fewer days than the seamen now receive.

A spokesman for the union said the executive did not discuss Wilson's charges, although it must have been in the background.

"The whole discussion has been based on the present situation and the industrial dispute, together with the final offer," the union spokesman said.

The strike - ending resolution contained a formula to "adjourn strike action" for a year pending the report of a government court of inquiry into working conditions at sea.

The strike has tied up nearly 900 ships in British ports and 27,000 men have been idle.

The resolution said the executive had decided to accept the ship owners' latest offer "being aware of the great hardship caused to the citizens of the United Kingdom."

GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE RECOMMENDED

Overhaul of CBC Structure Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC's programming authority should be moved closer to its production centres through the appointment of senior vice-presidents to be located in Montreal and Toronto network centres, the Commons broadcasting committee has recommended in a report tabled today.

The committee, reporting on hearings into the controversy over the network television program This Hour Has Seven Days, also recommended establishment of a grievance procedure to prevent future personnel troubles becoming public.

It called for a clearer definition of the "functions and authority" of the corporation's president who now is expected to be knowledgeable in public affairs, communications techniques and an able administrator.

A CBC spokesman said the corporation's board of directors is considering the committee report at a meeting in Ottawa but probably would have no comment at least until the meeting concludes Thursday.

The Seven Days squabble was triggered by the corporation's decision against using co-hosts Laurier LaPierre and Patrick Watson on the program next season.

A threatened strike over the issue was headed off when Prime Minister Pearson appointed Stuart Keate, publisher

Dynasty Bounces Back from '66 Low

Dynasty gained 25 cents to $10.25 shortly before noon on the mining section of the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Earlier it had touched a 1966 low of $9.25. Norgold rose four to a 1966 high of 32 cents.

Brenda put on 30 cents to $8. New Cronin was off half a cent to a new low of 21½ cents.

In the oils Fort St. John was down 10 to a low of 75 cents.

AT TORONTO Norgold traded 511,800 shares and gained 4 cents to its 1966 high of 33½ cents to highlight moderate dealings.

In the main list, Massey-Ferguson dropped ¾ to 33½ and CPR ⅝ to 63¼. MacLean-Hunter and Distillers Seagram fell ½ each to 35½ and 33¾.

In senior base metals, Denison lost ½ to 54, Inco ⅜ to 95¼ and Noranda ⅛ to 52⅝.

Hudson's Bay Oil was ahead ⅜ to 18⅝ and Pacific Petroleum ¼ to 12 in a stronger Western oils group.

AT NEW YORK volume for the day was estimated at 5,900,000 shares, compared with 6,280,000 Tuesday.

Despite the size of the losses by the averages, one broker said reaction was not severe to U.S. bombing of oil installations near Hanoi and Haiphong. He pointed out that the decline came on low trading volume.

Sperry Rand, down about half a point, looked like the most active stock of the day.

Aircrafts, electronics and airlines were off sharply. Douglas, actively traded, lost more than 2 points. General Dynamics and Boeing were down a point or more.

Zenith declined a point and Raytheon fell about half a point.

American Telephone lost nearly a point and Du Pont was down more than a point.

Eastman Kodak and General Electric fell about 2 points.

Among Canadian issues, Dome Mines was up ⅝, McIntyre Porcupine ½, Alcan and Canadian Pacific were down ⅝, Distillers Seagrams and International Nickel ⅛.

IN MONTREAL banks continued to move to higher levels but most other sections were narrowly lower in light trading.

Industrial volume was 36,900 and mines and oils 243,600.

Utilities were down. CPR slid ⅜ to 63⅝ and Calgary Power ¼ to 26.

Papers continued a downward trend, with Consolidated easing ¼ to 38½ and Domtar ⅛ to 18.

Among the banks Montreal advanced ⅛ to 59.

Senior metals were down. In the base section Noranda eased ⅛ to 52¾. Among the primary issues Alcan dipped ⅜ to 38⅝ and Algoma ⅛ to 27.

Senior oils were lower, with B-A and Imperial each dropping ¼ to 32⅛ and 54¼ respectively.

Among the speculative mines and oils Cessland and Jubilee each fell 5 cents to $4.35 and $1.77 respectively.

IN LONDON the market opened cautiously but the news that the steel nationalization bill will be published Friday brought a slightly firmer tone in equities, with steels and companies with steel interests showing improvements.

Gilts were idle and only occasionally harder.

Dollar stocks were narrowly irregular, with small losses outnumbering small gains. Canadian Pacific lost another 1½ points and most other Canadians eased by around one point. British-American Oil and Consolidated Paper were a shade harder, however.

Canadian banks recovered Tuesday's small losses.

Home banks were steady and insurances went ahead.

Oils were quiet. Minings were dull.

Canada Oil Expert Leads Hunt

PORT ELIZABETH (AP)—A Canadian drilling expert will direct South Africa's first big attempt to find oil.

Edward Radu, 39, from Calgary, is drilling superintendent of a large oil rig being erected near the small town of Murraysburg, 210 miles northwest of here in the dusty, barren Karoo region.

The oil search is a vital project for South Africa in its attempts to make itself self-sufficient and immune from possible international boycotts. Opponents of the country's apartheid (race segregation) policies have many times called for international sanctions, and oil is South Africa's Achille's heel.

Comparatively small amounts of oil are produced locally from coal but the country is heavily dependent on overseas supplies which could be stopped in the same way that supplies to neighboring Rhodesia have been blocked by the British-led embargo.

Radu came to South Africa from Libyan oilfields to control drilling at the Murraysburg rig for the government-sponsored South African Oil Exploration Corp. (Soekor).

He will head a team of seven Canadians and about 60 local non-white laborers in round-the-clock drilling operations.

The 13-storey-high rig, weighing more than 1,000 tons, is described as one of the biggest in the world.

Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd and top government officials are expected to watch drilling begin June 29. Geologists believe prospects for finding oil in the Karoo are "favorable."

The rig is on the farm of Oscar Smuts but if the drillers strike oil he will not share in the profits. In South Africa's Cape Province, where the oil search is centred, mineral rights are vested in the state.

The Cape Town newspaper Die Burger, which has sources close to the government, says chances of finding oil in the offshore area known as Agulhas Bank are much better than in the Karoo. The Agulhas Bank lies off the southern tip of the African continent.

Several international oil companies have approached Soekor seeking concession rights for 60,000 square miles, or about one-third of the Agulhas Bank.

Chairman G. S. J. Kuschke said exploration work will begin next year.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Late session trading expanded on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today, with an aggressive demand in rye and barley.

Barley was traded in substantial quantities, with aggressive buying by processors and shippers.

Flax and rapeseed were also active, with rapeseed rallying after Chicago soybeans moved higher. Sales of flax included 500 tons to Europe.

Rye prices were up, with indications of overseas interests involved in the buying.

Oats was less active and limited mainly to domestic trade.

U.S. extension of the war in Viet Nam was attributed for the buying on the Winnipeg and U.S. markets, with the end of the British seamen's strike also affecting the Winnipeg market.

CHICAGO (AP)—Prices moved up briskly on all commodities in the grain futures market today after an unsteady start and by early afternoon July soybeans were ahead more than 9 cents a bushel.

Brokers said the demand apparently included a revival of speculative support all along the line. Wheat moved up about 5 cents, the extreme from early lows after prices were believed to have run into an accumulation of resting orders to reinstate long positions.

Reports from the southwest and Kansas said the expected increased movement of the grain into commercial channels on the recent setback had not materialized.

Arthur Mayse

Among the good fellows who add spice to life in this outpost is one who packed his wife off to Europe for a holiday a few weeks ago.

"Don't worry about us," he assured his helpmate, speaking for his young son and himself. We'll get along just fine."

And by their own definition, so they have. But when that favored housewife arrives home in a fortnight or so, she will find a massive task awaiting her.

This will be to re-civilize two males who have been batching long enough to evolve a primitive pattern of their own.

For a while after the plane bore her way, her menfolk stuck more or less faithfully to established routine. They ate their meals at the appointed times, sitting on chairs pulled up to a table. They swept and even dusted; made beds, changed sheets, washed their dishes, and put up lunches.

Then came a morning when sleeping in seemed more attractive than a proper breakfast, and an evening when the pair carried their plates into the living room rather than lose half a television program.

Thus breached, the walls crumbled rapidly. By the end of the first month, the father and only-too-willing son had shed the trappings and usages of our culture to such a degree that they might better be living in a wigwam.

★

What all this demonstrates seems to depend on how you approach the case.

I expect the viewpoint of the returned wife will be that everything goes to pot the moment a woman departs the scene. From the male angle, it becomes apparent that much of the housekeeper's round is waste motion, and that at least half the time consumed could be put to better, or at least more enjoyable uses.

It's an argument neither side can win, and any man who tries to lacks the sense he was born with.

In this troubled summer, when workers are demanding drastically increased rewards for their labor, it would take but a spark to start a housewives' strike.

Let matters reach that state and, gentlemen, we're in trouble.

The men I know who can wash and iron sheets, stuff and cook a fowl, sew in a zipper and juggle the tumblers of a jammed lock with a bobby pin wouldn't be heard from here to the corner if they all hollered together.

To make do is one thing, but to operate successfully so formidable a plant as a modern home is quite another.

★

There are those who will challenge this assertion. For their benefit—with help from a qualified source—I have compiled a check list.

Can you take a chuck steak and make it not only edible but palatable? (Me? Heck, no!)

Can you shrink one sweater to size and unshrink another? (What do you think I am, a magician yet?)

How would you bulk out a dinner prepared for three to serve seven? (Impossible. But I've seen her manage it.)

How do you arbitrate between the son who must eat at 5 p.m. and bathe at 6, and the daughter who has to eat at 6 and wash her hair at 6:15?) (I don't . . . I start bellowing.)

In-laws have turned up for an unexpected overnight visit. You haul out a foldaway bed unused since last October, and discover mice are nesting in it. How would you cope? (Dunno. Stitch the mice in, I guess.)

Any housewife worth the name would take these situations in stride, and emerge fresh as a daisy.

Getting back to the lorn husband and son whose wife and mother at latest report was still on the wrong side of the broad Atlantic:

They haven't gone hungry, they sleep reasonably well, and they are still on speaking terms.

"But," wistfully observes the man of the house—and what a hollow term that can be—"it's a long, long time since we've tasted mushroom gravy."

INJURIES CLAIM WIDOW

A 62-year-old woman injured in a car accident Sunday died in Royal Jubilee Hospital Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Muriel Bourque, 216 Wildwood, had been in critical condition since the car she was driving ran into a tree on Royal Oak Avenue, near Lochside.

She received multiple fractures and internal injuries.

Mrs. Bourque, a widow, was born in Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, and had lived in Victoria for 10 years.

She is survived by a daughter, Daphne Beattie, and five grandchildren, in Prince George.

Funeral arrangements are in charge of Haywards and will be announced later.

There will be no inquest but a coroner's inquiry will be held. A post mortem was being conducted this afternoon.

Driver Blamed By Jury

Negligence Found In Youth's Death

A coroner's jury Tuesday night blamed the traffic death of a 19-year-old Goldstream youth on Glen Lake Road on Douglas Morrison, 22, driver of the car.

The accident was caused by Morrison's "negligence," the jury decided.

Fatally injured June 4 when the Morrison car skidded from the road and sideswiped a tree was Lee Williams, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Williams of the Goldstream Inn.

Tuesday's inquest confirmed that the youth died at St. Joseph's Hospital about 12 hours after the accident from extensive brain damage and complications from a fractured leg.

Williams' two companions at the time of the accident testified that they and a third youth had drunk two dozen beer on the night of the accident while cruising between Victoria and the Colwood area looking for beach parties or girls.

Morrison, an apprentice plumber who lives at 1608 North Dairy, estimated he'd had about eight beers. His two companions most of the evening, Robert Brown, 955 Goldstream, and Charles David Lanthier, 3137 Glen Lake Road, could not remember how many they drank. They said they threw the empty bottles from the car.

IN OWN CAR

Williams was picked up at a friend's house after midnight and later Lanthier said he left the Morrison car and drove home from Colwood in his own car.

The accident occurred about 200 feet from his house and Lanthier said shortly after arriving home, he saw headlights blinking down the road, investigated and found the wreck.

He said Tuesday he did not know why Morrison was apparently coming to his house but in a statement to police after the accident he told them he assumed Morrison was trying to beat him to the house by a different route.

Asked why he had driven home at the 30 mile an hour speed limit, something he admitted was "quite abnormal for me," he said because "I can't see the police behind me at night as well as during the day."

FORCED OFF ROAD

Morrison said the accident happened because he was forced from the road.

"A pair of headlights were coming at me on my side of the road."

While he wasn't drunk, he said his reflexes might have been "a little deficient."

His car took the right-angle turn near the Sooke Road at about 30 miles an hour, he said and was safely through the turn when he had to leave the road to avoid the oncoming vehicle.

Police earlier testified that skid marks stretched for 115 feet from where the car left the pavement to where it hit a tree broadside.

Morrison said he could not account for the violent impact. He denied he had been racing to the Lanthier house.

Morrison said Williams also had been drinking. It was apparent in his walk when he picked him up, Morrison said.

Russ Seaman Recovered, Heads Home

Russian seaman Geogry Frolov said farewell to Victoria today.

The 35-year-old fisherman, who arrived here 12 days ago on a stretcher from the Soviet vessel Indigirka, will sail this week for his home town of Vladivostok.

A doctor from the Russian wheat ship, Otradnoe, now loading in Vancouver, arrived to pick up Frolov from Veterans' Hospital this afternoon.

Before leaving, the smiling Russian shook hands with hospital staff and through an interpreter thanked them for all their help.

MANY CALLERS

Hospital officials were surprised at the number of Russian-speaking people who called in to chat with the non-English-speaking seaman.

One man had him out to dinner, while another took him on a tour of the city.

Frolov will undergo further treatment when he arrives home.

Still More Drug Thefts

The third and fourth theft of equipment and drugs from doctors in the space of a week have been reported to city police.

Dr. Robert Morgan, 55 Tovey, told police his bag, containing a full bottle of morphine, tranquilizers and equipment totalling a value of $200, was stolen from his car parked in the St. Joseph's Hospital parking lot.

It was the second theft of a doctor's bag from the parking lot. Last Tuesday a bag belonging to Dr. Jack Patterson was taken.

Thirty capsules of tuinal have been reported missing from the office supply of Dr. Donald Shorting, 645 Fort.

Dr. Shorting told police there is evidence that quantities of the drug have been taken from his office over a period of time.

Last Wednesday a bag containing drugs and equipment, owned by Dr. Scott Groves, was taken from his car parked outside his Central Saanich home.

'LIQUID ARSENAL' SEIZED

Magistrate William Ostler today labelled the supply of over five dozen beer found in a youth's possession a "liquid arsenal."

Fining John Stevens, 4150 Tyndall, $40 on a charge of being a minor in possession of alcohol, the magistrate asked the youth: "Where were you going with that liquid arsenal?"

Court was told Stevens, in company with 20 or 30 other young people, was found May 28 by police with the beer in Mount Douglas Park.

Beach parties also had unhappy endings for Wilfred Brown, 3232 Wichlow, and Larry Marcotte, 2804 Rodney, who were fined $35 and $40 respectively on the same charge.

Brown was apprehended by Colwood RCMP drinking beer at a beach party at Esquimalt Lagoon.

HIDING BEER

Court was told Marcotte was seen hiding a case of beer behind some bushes at Blue Lagoon in Colwood the early morning of June 5.

When Edward Kellow, 1085 Hulford, was stopped for speeding in Duncan on May 21, police found a case of beer in his car. The youth was fined $35.

Daniel Young, 543 Northcott, was fined $50 on a charge of consuming liquor in a public place when he appeared in central court.

Court was told he was seen at Esquimalt Lagoon with a partially consumed bottle of beer in his hand. The prosecutor said a "young lady" under 21 was with him.

"The young lady," said Young to the magistrate before being fined, "was my wife."

Town Status Next Year For Sidney

Sidney village commission chairman next year will become a mayor and commissioners will be called aldermen.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said today the village council has requested town status.

Approval is expected to be mailed to the council in the next few days.

OVER 2,500

Sidney is eligible for town status as its population has overshot the 2,500-mark.

It will mean extra responsibilities for the village.

As of Jan. 1, 1967, it will take over the administration of welfare and will pay a per capita grant towards welfare costs.

Assessments, now under the jurisdiction of the government, will be taken over by the town.

Safety Gap

INQUIRY ASKED BY UNIONS

Union leaders met this morning with an inspector for the Workmen's Compensation Board following the death of a worker late Tuesday at Victoria Machinery Depot.

At the same time, the Victoria District and Vancouver Island Metal Trades Council issued a statement saying more attention should be paid to safety at the shipyard.

This morning's meeting was attended by Jim McConachy and Neil Hindle of the boilermakers, Don Douglas of the shipwrights, Ernest Orchin of the machinists, Andrew Manson of the riggers, A. H. Gildemeester of the painters, and WCB inspector Richard Hill.

HIT BY TACKLE

The dead man, Oliver Goldsmith, was president of the Victoria Shipyard Riggers Union, Local 643, and a well-known local sportsman. He was struck by a tackle after a boom broke on a floating crane, working on the $9 million offshore oil rig.

The metal trades council, an association of craft unions at shipyards and HMC Dockyard, sent a telegram to the chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Board, "demanding a full inquiry" into the accident.

The statement added: "The metal trades council are of the opinion that more stringent safety rules should be observed in the shipyards.

"The council is further of the opinion that safety inspectors employed full time in the yards should be appointed by the WCB and should be fully qualified in safety procedures and regulations."

VMD general manager J. V. Steele said every possible safety measure is taken at the yard.

There was an active safety committee which discusses all safety measures.

"Any safety measure recommended to me is immediately implemented," he said.

'VERY LAX'

Mr. Manson, president of the council, called conditions at VMD "very lax—something drastic has to be done."

Last January, four persons were injured when a gangway erected to one of the pontoons collapsed sending them crashing to the ground. Three were taken to hospital.

At that time, union spokesmen said there is "good basis for complaint about general safety supervision."

Library Closed On Dominion Day

Victoria Public Library will be closed all day Friday for the Dominion Day holiday.

It will be open Saturday as usual, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., and until 5:30 p.m. for the children's section.

City Mourns Loss Of Top Sportsman

By TERRY IZZARD

Oliver Goldsmith died Tuesday, only a few yards from the spot where he was born 52 years ago.

The veteran sportsman died instantly when rigging from a giant floating crane fell on him.

Ironically, the place where he was killed was once his favorite playground.

And what is now a company paint store was once his home.

The tragic story of Mr. Goldsmith's death was related today by lifetime friends.

As investigators sifted through the debris of the mangled 100-foot crane boom which ended Mr. Goldsmith's life, they recalled the tiny cafe which once bore the name Tom Goldsmith.

Today, huge cranes and workshops of Victoria Machinery Depot tower above the Dallas Road waterfront.

Oliver Goldsmith knew it well, having worked as a rigger for the company since the beginning of the Second World War.

But he also remembered the Dallas Road of the early 1900s when as a young lad he played cowboys and Indians in the bushes behind his home.

SOUTH PARK SCHOOL

With his brother Tommy and sister Margaret he would board the long-forgotten tramcars outside his home for the ride to South Park School.

The shipbuilding boom of 1940 changed all that and his father, Tom, reluctantly sold the family business to make way for expansion.

What no one could have known was that one day the industry behind their home would one day lead to Mr. Goldsmith's death.

Since he lived on the spot and was a rigger by trade, Mr. Goldsmith decided to join VMD.

One of the company's oldest employees, he was supervising lifting of a 45-ton section for a giant, $9 million oil rig when death struck.

BOOM SNAPPED

Without warning, the crane boom snapped and toppled to the ground.

Mr. Goldsmith, who was standing on the float housing the crane, was struck by a heavy metal pulley.

Fortunately no one else was hurt, but the father of three was dead on arrival at hospital.

Workmen on the spot said the pontoon swayed while being lifted, hitting a block of concrete which caused a whipping motion in the crane boom.

The sudden stress was apparently too much for the boom which collapsed.

Surveyors from Ziddel Exploration Company, Portland, which leased the crane to VMD, were on their way to Victoria today to assess damage.

Meanwhile, it is not yet known to what extent the mishap will delay work on the oil rig.

The only crane of its kind on the west coast, it will require a new boom before being operational.

Operating the crane at the time of the accident was VMD employee Peter Ash, of 3876 Seaton. He was taken home suffering shock.

Meanwhile, coroner Edmund Jorre de St. Jorre has called an inquest which will open Thursday night or Saturday, depending on the result of police investigations.

Mr. Goldsmith leaves a wife, Georgina, at the family home, 1139 Balmoral, two sons, Bruce and Oliver, and a daughter, Ruth Margaret.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been announced.

Gaglardi Set To Sign Up For New Jet

Highways Minister Gaglardi has speeded up negotiations for his $480,000 Lear jet plane and hopes to wrap up the deal this weekend.

He said Tuesday the government will enter into a lease-to-purchase contract for $5,913.50 a month.

"We will be able to cancel the agreement at any time if the plane doesn't work out," he said. "I've been offered many other planes but they aren't good enough. They cost twice as much to run and need twice as much room to land."

The second-hand six-passenger jet cruises at about 500 miles an hour and would cut the usual 90-minute flight to Kamloops from Victoria to 20 minutes.

Ask The Times

Q. Has there been press censorship in Rhodesia? M.B.

A. According to World News Digest, 1966, the Rhodesian government first imposed press censorship following its declaration of independence Nov. 11, 1965. The government announced a widening of these powers Feb. 8, 1966.

PRAIRIE FORECASTER MORE USED TO RAIN QUERIES

If He Blows One, Blame the Wind

By BOB DONAHUE

Victoria's new weatherman, Allan McQuarrie, is a tall earnest man who speaks softly and his hair is silver grey.

But it is not, he says, the result of a 25-year affair with a fickle mistress, weather forecasting for the Department of Transport.

For the past 18 years he has been in charge of the Calgary weather office. He will officially take up his new duties here Aug. 1.

REGIONAL POST

Victoria's weatherman for the past 15 years, William Mackie, leaves July 4 for Vancouver where he will become regional superintendent of observation services for the Department of Transport.

Mr. McQuarrie says the two major problems in the weather sage business is the weather and the public, in that order.

TIMING COUNTS

"It's timing that counts in predicting the weather. If you say it's going to rain tomorrow and it rains tonight then everyone thinks you have made a bad forecast. It's not the forecast that was bad, it was the timing.

"But the main complaints made to weather forecasters are not about their forecasts, but just the bad weather."

He said he may have some difficulty in making the change from predicting prairie weather to coast weather.

"One of the distinct differences is that people on the prairies only want to know if it's going to rain and people on the coast are mainly concerned with the wind."

Mr. McQuarrie said for the first few weeks of his duties here his forecasts might be influenced greatly by just looking out the window of the Gonzales Hill weather station.

"That is where computers and science end and judgment begins."

He was born in a small town near Edmonton and grew up in the Peace River country. He then attended Normal School and became a school teacher for seven years.

He left the teaching job and went to the University of Alberta where he graduated in 1941.

He worked for some time in Montreal and Prince George before going to Calgary.

He is married and has two daughters, Donna, 18, and Shirley, 14.

The Changing Role

AT THE RECENT BRUSSELS meeting of NATO ministers, Mr. Paul Martin voiced strong confidence in the future of the organization. He did this, despite the withdrawal of France from the military structure of the group and the consequent disruption of the deployment of defence forces.

The greatest strength of NATO, since its creation seventeen years ago, has lain in the Soviet threat of aggression. The greater the threat, the greater the unity and determination of the NATO members. Conversely, the chief factor in any deterioration of the mutual defence alliance must be a reduction of the Russian threat and a consequent disappearance of the need for the arrangement.

Mr. Martin appears to have referred only to the military aspect of NATO in his remarks, and the implication is that he believes a Soviet threat of aggression against Europe will continue for an indefinite time into the future. This may well be basically true. A world without NATO might have been a very different world from the one we have today. But there can be little doubt that, whether due to NATO or not, the climate between Russia and the West has improved immeasurably in the past few years.

This new relationship between East and West has partly resulted from the presence of nuclear armaments, which, while vastly increasing the lethal possibilities of a war, at the same time decrease the likelihood of a major war occurring. Mutual annihilation is not a feasible foreign policy for any nation.

There are other factors in this warming of the international climate. The rise and the potential of Red China have, even at this early stage, exerted great influence on the postures of both East and West. The natural evolution of the people of Russia, who seek greater freedoms and a larger share of consumer goods, has lessened the differences between peoples. A growing interplay of visitors and of trade has added its encouraging effects.

Thus the original concept of NATO as a bristling fortress continually on the alert for a Soviet lunge has largely dissipated. If the organization is to survive to render the valuable services of which it is capable, it must change its nature and its functions to meet the changing requirements of today and tomorrow.

The new objective will not be so much to defend members as to inculcate peace; not so much to stand on guard against Russia as to open the way for communication, interchange, co-operation. This will be a much more positive achievement, and should be a more fruitful one.

To Encourage Canadian Investors

IN OTTAWA THIS WEEK FEDeral and provincial representatives along with a number of top private business advisers are meeting to discuss the Canadian securities business — an exploratory step toward laying down a uniform system for regulating and administering trade in stocks and bonds.

The importance of this meeting cannot be over-rated. Even though it is not a policy meeting, the recommendations which come out of it could go far to transform the Canadian economic system by encouraging a larger flow of the country's savings into the venture capital market. It could be the beginnings of a system of "people's capitalism" along the lines which have contributed to the development of the United States as the strongest economic power in the world.

There is nothing remarkable about the reluctance of many Canadians to put their savings into enterprises designed to develop the country and produce new wealth. A confusion of federal and provincial laws and regulatory bodies, some good and some bad, has resulted in too many opportunities for the "sharp" promoters who have taken advantage of the unsophisticated investor. Some economists and analysts believe that lack of public confidence in equity investments has been an important factor in Canada's gaining the reputation of being a nation of timid savers rather than bold investors in new enterprise.

What is needed is a new deal for the Canadian investor so that when he puts his savings into enterprises designed to develop the country and produce new wealth he will know that he is getting an even break. This requires new and tough laws on disclosure of corporate information right from the time a company is formed and capital is raised. It requires an end to special advantages for the "insiders," those who have access to news about companies ahead of the small shareholders and who can use this information for their own profit.

Canadian experience has proved, as it was proved in the United States years ago, that self-regulation of the investment industry will not work because of constant conflicts of interest. Strong government regulation must be provided and it must be applied in a uniform manner across the country. This will be a difficult problem due to the jealous way in which several provinces guard their constitutional responsibility in the field. But it should not be impossible for the experts meeting in Ottawa to work out a new system which can be applied to the whole country and which would guarantee for Canadians with funds to invest in new enterprises the protection to which they are entitled.

The next step will be to sell the plan to the politicians and that can be done only if the public demonstrates its desire for a thoroughgoing reform of the whole field of regulation and administration of the securities business to bring it into line with the needs of Canada in the modern world.

Three Years of Reform Talk

AFTER THREE DAYS OF DEliberations in Frankfurt last week, representatives of the ten leading financial powers once again failed to come up with any solution to the problem of world monetary reform. The delegates, in fact, were unable even to finish a report expressing their differences on the subject.

The only agreement reached was that there are two main blocks to monetary reform — France's opposition to change and the increasing United States balance of payments deficit resulting from the Viet Nam war. The group meets again next week and some optimism has been expressed that at least it will be possible to complete a report on the subject for presentation to the finance ministers of the 10 powers at the end of July.

At the ministers' meeting a decision must be taken on whether to go forward with the second phase of discussions, bringing together at the bargaining table a number of smaller nations which would be vitally affected by international monetary reform — or the lack of it — since they are pinched by the lack of credit for financing their trade.

The ten major powers have been discussing reform for almost three years now and are little closer to a decision than they were at the start. The countries outside the inner circle can hardly be blamed if they become impatient at the failure to reach agreement even on the need for a new means of settling accounts between trading nations. Their hostility cannot help but be aroused, either, if the decision to admit more countries to the negotiating table is a negative one.

Eye to Eye

As the eye specialist involved and the subject of some comments in Mr. Art Stott's column of June 25, I would like to make a reply.

On the day he visited my office, I had seen a person with acute glaucoma in both eyes. This person had no appointment yet took a great deal of time. While Mr. Stott spent the evening with his pipe and slippers, composing the article, I was in the operating room for two hours with this woman. She is doing well and will retain her sight.

To compare this type of work to a dentist's or a restaurant shows some lack of insight. Mr. Stott can always buy a new set of choppers or cook his own food.

I give every patient the best attention that I can, for everyone is regarded as possibly having some lethal or blinding disease, until such has been excluded. As every person is different, I cannot work with my eye on the clock, or predict the time needed. I know Mr. Stott's time is valuable but I am sure he values his eyes at more than an hour's working time.

If this work was simply a matter of fitting glasses, it could be done to a time limit, in fact glasses can be obtained with no delay and no appointment, from the counter girl in a downtown department store.

My office staff do the best they can to run an efficient appointment system and they are under constant pressure to squeeze another one in sooner. Many unexpected extra patients have to be accepted at the last moment because their symptoms sound ominous. A dentist can refuse to see a patient, for a night's toothache can be eased by tablets, but overnight damage to an eye may be beyond repair, so I dare not refuse to see anyone who seriously asks for aid.

I shall continue to do the best that I can for my patients and I trust my staff are working to the same end.

Mr. Stott knows who I am, and as I am bound by the ethical rules of my profession to abstain from advertisement, I must end this letter with— Ophthalmologist.

Take It From Abraham

If Abby did not have her tongue in her cheek, when she described the letter from "A Believer," giving all that rubbish about Sarah the wife of Abraham, having lost "not three but seven husbands on the first night of her marriages," etc., as a "beautiful letter," may I suggest that she should study the Bible a little closer, especially the 11th and 23rd chapters of Genesis, giving details of Abraham's life, and see for herself what ridiculous twaddle "A Believer" wrote.

I really think she must have been pulling Abby's leg, or Abby her's, in accepting it and endorsing it. Abby's column is usually so very sane, and generally correct.—E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful.

FROM WASHINGTON

By JOSEPH ALSOP

China's Continuous Convulsion

OCCASIONALLY, in a roil of thunder, a stab of lightning vividly illuminates the strange night-landscape. For an instant figures are seen to be locked in mortal combat, while others, wounded, sink to their knees, and otherwise to fight again. Then darkness covers all once more. That really is not an excessively dramatic description of the way the professional China-watchers see the present situation in mainland China, through their admittedly unsatisfactory telescopes.

Alsop

To begin with, even the briefest convulsion involving China is a drama on a world scale; and Mao Tse-tung's once monolithic China now appears to be in a state of continuous convulsion.

Puzzling Aspect

The fact that the convulsion still goes on is really its most puzzling aspect. It was not at all surprising that old Mao Tse-tung's obviously failing health touched off a succession struggle, even before the state funeral. It was not at all surprising, either, that the first move was made by the Chinese element which hankers for pragmatic, common-sense Communism.

It was not surprising, either, that these wicked "modern revisionists" were counter-attacked, with apparent success, by the hard-nosed group led by Teng Hsiao-ping and the army boss, Marshal Lin Piao. But when the "modern revisionists" were publicly driven from their stronghold in the Peking city government, that should have been the end of it.

Instead, the most unexpected people have gone right on fighting back in the most unprecedented manner. Take the president of Nanking University, Kuang Ya-ming. He started in the party propaganda department, held two other university presidencies before being promoted to Nanking. In short, he is an ambitious careerist.

Attack on Professors

Some of the Nanking professors were to be cashiered for revisionist and bourgeois leanings. According to the provincial radio, president Kuang therefore held "an enlarged meeting" of the party apparatus in the university, which he "tried to hoodwink" by "manipulation." Following this meeting on June 2, he proclaimed on June 3 that "the situation for a counterattack was excellent." A "six-hour coup d'etat had been smashed," he said, and he ordered the revisionist professors to be reinstated.

After that the sinister Kuang got his comeuppance from the provincial party committee, who summarily removed him from the Nanking presidency. The same pattern, of attempted resistance followed by disciplinary action, has appeared in a good many other reported incidents in other provinces. The striking feature of them all, of course, is not the eventual disciplinary action; it is, rather, the resistance that is still maintained at this unlikely stage of the game.

There are other symptoms that the internal struggle is by no means over, although Teng Hsiao-ping's group so obviously has the upper hand for the moment. For example, the official People's Daily was supposed to have been brought into line after an obstinate tussle (when quotations from the thought of Mao replaced the weather report!). But once again, nowadays, the China-watchers are finding very marked differences of emphasis between the party newspaper and the far more strident army newspaper, Liberation Daily. From countless signs of this sort, nine out of 10 of the best analysts, in government and out, have concluded that the issue in China is still in doubt.

Last Gasp

There are two things to be said about this. In the first place, such wise analysts as Professor Lucian Pyd of M.I.T. have always foreseen a super-Maoist interlude, as a sort of last gasp of the old order, before the Chinese people managed to reshape the Communist system to suit their own needs, habits and talents. We may now be seeing the uncertain beginnings of this interlude.

In the second place, however, after the catastrophe of "the great leap" had been tidied up, no analyst of any pretensions ever foresaw the sort of thing that is now going on, prior to the death of Father Mao. But long before the state funeral, with Mao at least able to serve as a figurehead, the ferment burst out wholly prematurely. And even after the seemingly successful hard-liner's counterattack, the ferment still goes on.

Influence of War

All the analysts agree that these strong symptoms of trouble and division inside China make any kind of Chinese intervention in the Vietnamese war even less likely than it used to be — and it was always unlikely. That is important, of course. But the long-range meaning of the Chinese ferment is even more important.

For the short run, anything can happen, even something as lunatic as a renewed attempt at a "great leap." But for the long run, this degree of ferment at this time means that the internal forces demanding great changes in Mao's China are so strong that they are almost bound to prove irresistible in the end. And if that reading is correct, what is happening is indeed dramatic.

'Wrong-Way' Again on Decimals

THE current ruckus over the three-month-old decision to decimalize Britain's currency in 1971 is demonstrating once again that if there is a wrong way of doing something then James Callaghan, chancellor of the exchequer, can almost certainly be counted upon to find it.

Dewey

The supreme custodian of the country's purse strings originally laid a tentative claim to the title of Wrong-Way Callaghan with the Labor government's first major budget, a gruesomely long and complicated document that was later hacked to bits by the opposition.

That claim has since been fortified by a series of stop-gap mini-budgets and fortified yet again, in decisive fashion, by that recent marvel of unselective muddle, the selective employment tax.

Business Split

Now, with one half of the business community at odds with the other half over decimalization, Mr. Callaghan's title is surely beyond dispute. Having pondered the merits of two possible decimal systems—having pondered, indeed, to the point where it became indecent to ponder any longer—the chancellor's unerring instinct led him to choose what is almost certainly the wrong one.

Ever since 1963 it has been accepted that decimalization of British currency would involve adopting either the so-called pound-cent system, with the present pound as the basic unit, or the 10-shillings-cent system, using half the value of the pound as the basic unit. It was then that the Halsbury committee, after an 18-month study, table its famous split report in which four of the committee's six members favored the pound and the remaining two held out for the smaller unit.

Behind the split lay what the committee took to be a conflict between domestic and international factors. To begin with, it was generally accepted that the 10-shilling unit was greatly preferable to the pound in nearly every respect.

Smaller Unit Advantage

With the pound now valued at roughly $3 Canadian, the 10-shilling unit would obviously correspond more closely to the basic currency units of the various countries that have adopted or are intending to adopt the dollar system.

For purely domestic purposes, moreover, there is no comparison between the two units. The hundredth part of a pound is equivalent to three Canadian cents, which is too large a sum to serve as the smallest unit of exchange. Thus the pound-cent-½ system would entail the use of half-pennies and thereby sacrifice much of the simplicity of the decimal system. A final consideration is that the 10-shilling system would be much less costly to introduce.

On the other hand, the Halsbury committee had before it strong representations on behalf of London's international banking and financial community to the effect that eliminating the dear old pound would have "grave consequences" for sterling as an international exchange currency.

These interests admitted that foreign attachment to the pound may be irrational—what's in a name, after all? But they maintained that the attachment was real none the less and that it was, in these days of balance of payments difficulties, of extreme importance to Britain.

So far as the majority of the committee was concerned, it was this international argument which tipped the balance in favor of the pound.

And it was the international argument, as passed along by the committee, which finally led Mr. Callaghan to announce last March that when Britain goes decimal five years hence it will adopt the pound-cent-½ system. As it has turned out, however, this was one coin the chancellor should have bitten.

No Basis in Fact

He would have discovered, for example, that the famous international case has no basis in demonstrable fact. The idea that abandoning the pound would have serious adverse effects on sterling was merely a supposition that has never been checked out either by the financial community, by the committee or by anyone else. The truth is that to this day no one has the foggiest notion about how the world would react to a new currency unit.

Worse, the committee compounded the error of overestimating the case for the pound by underestimating the case against it. Just as it accepted the financial community's "evidence" on faith, so it accepted the scanty representations that had been made in favor of the 10-shilling system as being the true measure of its support throughout the entire domestic business community.

Homework Undone

The result of the committee's failure to do its homework properly, and of Mr. Callaghan's failure to do his own homework properly, has been a first-class fiasco. While financial interests continue to hold out for the pound, the domestic sector of the economy has come down heavily in favor of the 10-shilling unit — including among others the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, the Retail Credit Federation, the Consumer's Council, the Brewers' Society, the nationalized transport industries, the vending machine people and even some banks which had earlier supported the pound.

Indeed, so convinced are the supporters of the 10-shilling system that Mr. Callaghan has made a bad blunder that they have now launched what amounts to a campaign to persuade him to change his mind. So far, the chancellor is sticking to his guns, imploring his critics to accept his decision and to stop confusing the issue. In the meantime, the confused and unhappy British businessman is left to envy the Australians, South Africans and others who merely decided to decimalize their currency and then went ahead and did it.

New Methods

Toronto Daily Star

THE current epidemic of labor unrest that is sweeping the country is making one point quite clear. The old tactics of pounding tables and forming picket lines are no longer effective in reaching quick and satisfactory settlements.

As automation becomes a greater fact of life, labor and management have to devise new methods of dealing with a whole new set of problems. Government, caught in the cross-fire, has to exercise some leadership in getting both parties to accept new attitudes.

Mr. Justice Samuel Freedman foresaw this need last year as he studied the controversy over the CNR's proposal to move from the steam engine to the diesel age by having crews and equipment run over longer distances.

He cautioned management not to introduce automation and other major changes abruptly and unilaterally; rather they should be subject to negotiation between management and labor. It should be a matter of social conscience on the part of any business or industry going into the field of automation that some of the resulting gains and savings should be applied to helping those workers who have been displaced. At the same time, organized labor must not stubbornly reject inevitable change.

From the Times of June 29, 1906:

Recognition of the new municipality of Oak Bay by proclamation has now been officially made. First elections are to take place early next month and the council will meet soon after that. The agitation for incorporation arose when Saanich proposed to organize itself as such. Residents of Oak Bay felt they did not want to ally themselves with a municipality of Saanich as the interests of the one district were different from those of the other.

OTTAWA, PROVINCES

Hospital Grant Demand Grows

OTTAWA (CP)—The pressure is being turned on for a second time this year to have the federal and provincial governments increase their grants for hospital construction to compensate for higher construction costs.

Members of Parliament have been receiving requests from such organizations as the Ontario Hospital Association to turn the heat on Health Minister MacEachen.

One result may have been a complaint Thursday in the Commons health and welfare committee by Marvin Howe (PC—Wellington-Huron) that current federal grants of $2,000-a-bed are unrealistic.

Mr. Howe asked whether the federal government has ever considered proposing a percentage - o f- construction - cost formula.

Dr. J. N. Crawford, federal deputy health minister, said some consideration has been given to this. The most popular suggestion had been that federal, provincial and municipal governments share equally.

Dr. Lewis Brand (PC—Saskatoon) asked whether an increase is planned in line with rising construction costs and, if not, why not.

Dr. Crawford said the question was a matter of policy and one to which the health minister would have to reply. He recalled that the federal-provincial tax structure committee was looking into the whole question of shared-cost programs.

Ottawa has been under a lot of pressure to increase hospital construction grants. Mr. MacEachen had announced earlier in the year that the grants, scheduled to end in 1968, would be continued another two years until March, 1970, and there was no plan for an increase.

Dr. Crawford said the federal government recognizes that $2,000 a bed is "not very much." It amounted to about 12 per cent of the cost of a new bed now.

But over the years a great many beds had been built under the stimulus of the grants and the extent of federal participation was something for the federal cabinet to determine.

The background to Dr. Crawford's statement includes last February's federal - provincial conference at which the federal government agreed, under provincial pressure, to extend the life of the construction grants.

The reason for the two-year extension at current levels was based on Quebec's decision, at that time to opt out of such grants in favor of an equivalent cash payment provided some system could be worked out for doing so. Working out the system was left to the tax structure committee.

Hanoi Oil Depots Bombed

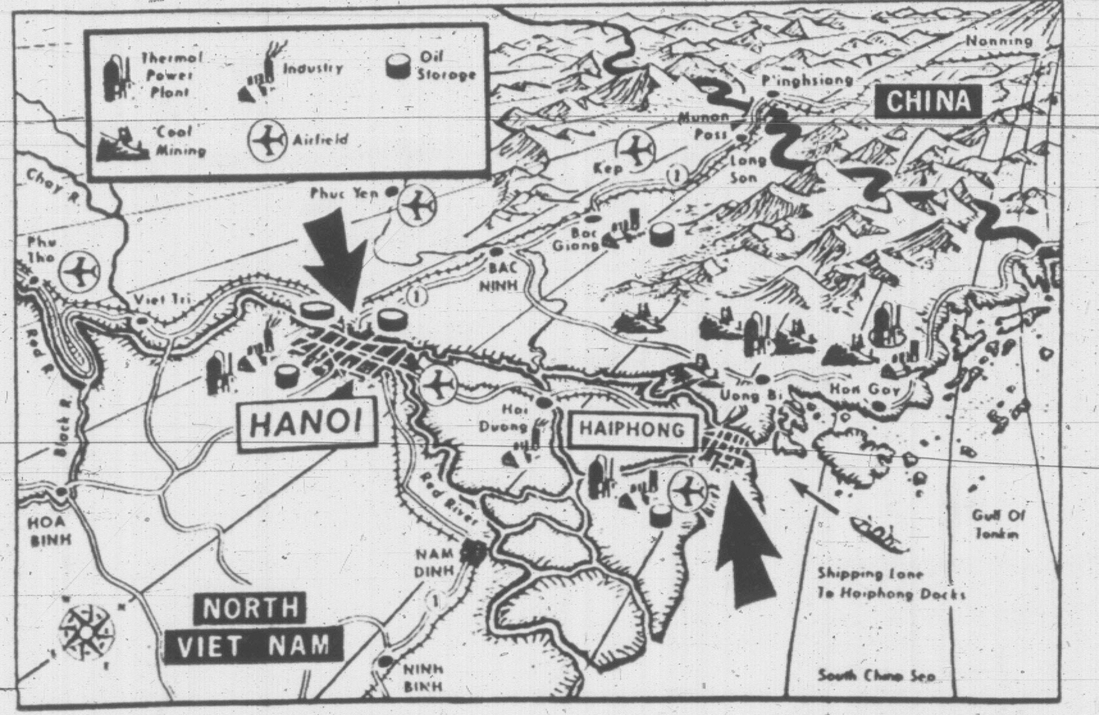
U.S. Action Under Fire



STRATEGIC OIL SUPPLY DEPOTS in North Viet Nam hit today by U.S. bombers are shown in drawing. Air force jets bombed storage tanks three miles from the centre of Hanoi, North Viet Nam capital, while navy planes struck fuel areas 50 miles to the east of the port city of Haiphong. The Red China border is about 100 miles from Hanoi. (AP Wirephoto).

WANTS EXPLANATION

U.K. Regrets Action

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Wilson expressed regret over today's U.S. bombing of oil depots near Hanoi and said Britain is unable to support the action.

An announcement of the prime minister's view on the U.S. bombing of fuel targets three miles from Hanoi and two miles from the Port of Haiphong was made after Wilson had requested urgent clarification from Washington of reasons for the raids.

The White House in Washington declined comment on Wilson's statement.

"We have made it clear on many occasions that we cannot support an extension of the bombing to such areas," Wilson said.

DIFFICULT TO ASSESS

"Her Majesty's government have noted with regret that U.S. aircraft have attacked North Vietnamese targets touching on the populated areas of Hanoi and Haiphong. It is difficult for the British government, which is not involved in the fighting in Viet Nam, to assess the importance of any particular action which the U.S. government regards as militarily necessary in this conflict.

"Nevertheless, we have made it clear on many occasions that we cannot support an extension of the bombing in such areas, even though we were confident that the U.S. forces would take every precaution, as always, to avoid civilian casualties.

"We believe that the value of each application of force must be judged not merely in terms of the military need . . . but also in terms of the additional suffering and distress which it inflicts upon innocent people . . .

"The opportunity for bringing all the fighting in Viet Nam to an end is open to Hanoi and the onus for continuing it rests there also."

'NEGOTIATION PATH MUCH MORE DIFFICULT'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said today the bombing of North Viet Nam oil depots indicates a new stage in the war and "will make the road to the negotiating table that much more difficult."

"I think also it will bring about greater amounts of aid from the Soviet Union and Peking," the Montana senator told reporters who asked whether he approved the action.

Mansfield said the destruction of the petroleum facilities "will not deter infiltration" of North Vietnamese into South Viet Nam, although he said it may slow it for the time being.

He said he thinks the end result may be increased infiltration.

RUSSIA CHARGES:

'U.S. in Blind Rage At Own Helplessness'

MOSCOW (AP)—Moscow radio called the U.S. air raids near Hanoi and Haiphong today a "new dangerous step by the U.S. ruling circles in expanding aggression against the Vietnamese people."

"Contrary to all the lessons of history," it said on its domestic service, "the U.S. government is resorting to banditry and force in blind rage at the knowledge of its own helplessness.

"The latest act of international piracy . . . serves as an open challenge to all countries favoring the immediate cessation of U.S. aggression in Viet Nam. The world public has received with rage and disgust the news of Washington's latest senseless act which will further exacerbate international tension.

"Ties of fraternal friendship and militant solidarity link the Soviet and Vietnamese peoples. Our country and the other Socialist states are providing, and will continue to provide, the necessary aid in the just struggle of the Vietnamese people."

Canada Against Bombings

OTTAWA (UPI)—Prime Minister Pearson told the Commons Canada "regrets" the American decision to bomb the North Vietnamese cities of Hanoi and Haiphong.

"My government has always held a let-up in the pattern of air strikes is one of the major elements constituting a prelude to peaceful negotiations," the minister said.

"When the American government decided to resume its bombings of North Viet Nam after the pause last January, the Canadian government expressed its regrets.

"I am sure we would all be glad to see the bombing stopped, glad to see the intervention of the North in the South stopped, and glad to see unconditional negotiations and peace," Pearson continued.

Racial Gunfight

CORDELE, Ga. (UPI) — Whites and Negroes engaged in the third straight round of racial violence early today, exchanging gunfire for about 90 minutes. Police Capt. L. T. Jobs said no one was hurt.

Heavy Damage Reported

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. jet planes set raging fires with bombs and rockets today in previously-immune fuel depots of Hanoi and Haiphong, representing about 60 per cent of North Viet Nam's strategic oil supply. World reaction boiled up while smoke still soared above the flames.

One target area of the raids, which pilots described as highly successful, was three miles from the centre of Hanoi, the North Vietnamese capital. The other was in the dock area of Haiphong, two miles from the heart of that major port.

The U.S. Air Force announced one plane, an F-105 Thunderchief fighter-bomber fell in the attack and the pilot was missing. Radio Hanoi said seven planes were shot down.

In Washington, U.S. Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara told a press conference one aim was to make North Viet Nam's infiltration of South Viet Nam more costly; another was to save the lives of Americans and their allies fighting in South Viet Nam.

McNamara said there was aerial opposition outside Hanoi and one enemy MiG fighter plane was possibly destroyed.

A communique said the two fuel depots were vital to the support of "the mounting North Vietnamese aggression" against South Viet Nam, and the attack was "consistent with our continuing policy of bombing only military targets in North Viet Nam."

The previous closest attacks were on missile sites 15 miles from Hanoi and 10 miles from Haiphong.

The spokesman said attacks Tuesday also destroyed two major bridges 27 miles northwest and 35 miles north of Hanoi. Both bridges are on supply lines linking with China.

Although the Hanoi target was three miles from the centre of the city, the spokesman said it was in the countryside with no sizable density of population around it.

The communique said:

"As compared with 1965 averages, truck movements from North to South Viet Nam during the first five months of 1966 hav doubled. Daily tonnages of supplies moved into the south have increased 150 per cent.

"Infiltration of men has increased 120 per cent. To maintain this sharply increased rate of infiltration, North Vietnamese oil imports so far this year are 50 to 70 per cent higher than in 1965."

Destruction of the Haiphong and Hanoi facilities "will make infiltration of men and supplies into South Viet Nam more costly and more difficult."

OTHER ACTION LIGHT

The air offensive in the North, now in its 16th month, completely dominated the U.S. command's daily war report. In South Viet Nam, where thousands of U.S. troops are in the field searching for the enemy, "only very light and scattered, minor contacts" were reported.

On the political front, the threat of a Buddhist boycott of South Viet Nam's September

GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE RECOMMENDED

Overhaul of CBC Structure Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC's programming authority should be moved closer to its production centres through the appointment of senior vice-presidents to be located in Montreal and Toronto network centres, the Commons broadcasting committee has recommended in a report tabled today.

The committee, reporting on hearings into the controversy over the network television program This Hour Has Seven Days, also recommended establishment of a grievance procedure to prevent future personnel troubles becoming public.

It called for a clearer definition of the "functions and authority" of the corporation's president who now is expected to be knowledgeable in public affairs, communications techniques and an able administrator.

A CBC spokesman said the corporation's board of directors is considering the committee report at a meeting in Ottawa but probably would have no comment at least until the meeting concludes Thursday.

The Seven Days squabble was triggered by the corporation's decision against using co-hosts Laurier LaPierre and Patrick Watson on the program next season.

A threatened strike over the issue was headed off when Prime Minister Pearson appointed Stuart Keate, publisher

RUSSIAN SPARKS VERBAL SLUGFEST

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Ranking Soviet Deputy Dimitri Polyansky last night used Canada as the battleground to charge the United States with the sole responsibility for ending the war in Viet Nam.

Polyansky, the most senior Russian official to visit Canada, unleashed his broadside in a nose-to-nose confrontation with External Affairs Minister Paul Martin as the latter was bidding him farewell at the end of an official dinner party.

The scene was the venerable 100-year-old Rideau Club across from Parliament Hill where Polyansky had shaken Canadian parliamentarians with an attack against the United States in his after-dinner speech.

At the top of the stairs, wi an interpreter wedged in b tween, he told Martin t United States had started t Viet Nam war and must end

He told some 150 dinne guests on his last night Ottawa that it was quite obviou who was the victim" and th aggressor in Viet Nam.

"The United States entere another man's house," sa Polyansky. "It was not Vie Nam which attacked the Unite States but the United State attacked Vietnamese citie roads and villages, and poisone their crops and destroyed the forests."

"Not one single Vietname bomb has killed or maimed on United States man, woman o child."

In remarks which were inter spersed with uncertain boo from the Canadians, the Sovie deputy said all people every where must work to end the war so the Vietnamese peopl would have the chance to decid their own internal affairs.

SOVIET INSISTS:

We'll Never Accept Bonn Nuclear Force

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN

OTTAWA—The Soviet Union will never, under any circumstances, accept a West Germany armed with nuclear weapons, according to one of the leading spokesmen of the U.S.S.R.

In a hard-hitting speech that took Canadian officials by surprise, Soviet First Deputy Dimitri Polyansky said the apparent tranquility in Europe was concealing a far from happy situation.

"It appears tranquil," he told an official dinner hosted by External Affairs Minister Paul Martin.

"The soldiers are in their barracks and not in the trenches."

But he asked if this external peace was not "hiding gathering storm clouds."

The Soviet Union was not oversimplifying the situation in Western Europe, he said.

UNDER HITLER

"We are not trying to draw an equation between what is happening in West Germany today and what went on under Hitler."

But fact has decreed that there are now two states in Germany and the eastern portion is a socialist state seeking peace with all countries, Polyansky said.

Certain circles in West Germany were not happy with recent developments and opposed agreements made by anti-Hitler elements, he contended.

Appeal Bid By Bennett

VANCOUVER (CP)—Premier Bennett of B.C. will attempt to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada a decision granting a new trial to a former civil servant who sued him for slander.

George L. Murray, counsel for the premier, said he will make application for leave to appeal the B.C. appeal court decision granting George E. P. Jones a new trial.

Mr. Jones, former chairman of the B.C. purchasing commission, earlier this week was granted a new trial of an action in which he claimed Mr. Bennett slandered him during an address to a Social Credit meeting.

ping circles is one of relief," said a spokesman for the shipping federation.

The seamen went on strike for a 40-hour week.

ACCEPT FINAL OFFER

The shipowners' final offer of a cut in the working week to 48 hours—with 40 hours promised next year—was accepted along with 48 days annual vacation, four fewer days than the seamen now receive.

A spokesman for the union said the executive did not discuss Wilson's charges, although it must have been in the background.

"The whole discussion has been based on the present situation and the industrial dispute, together with the final offer," the union spokesman said.

The strike-ending resolution contained a formula to "adjourn strike action" for a year pending the report of a government court of inquiry into working conditions at sea.

The strike has tied up nearly 900 ships in British ports and 27,000 men have been idle.

The resolution said the executive had decided to accept the ship owners' latest offer "being aware of the great hardship caused to the citizens of the United Kingdom."

Victoria Man To Judge PNE Dog Show

A feature of the 1966 Pacific National Exhibition will be the three championship dog show and obedience trials.

To be held in the Forum, the dog show will be presented August 20, 22 and 23, and the obedience trials will be held August 24.

The PNE will feature a salute to the B.C. Centenary with a Centennial Jamboree. It runs from August 20 to September 5.

The dog show is expected to draw entries from throughout the Pacific Northwest and from other parts of Canada and the United States.

Judges will be R. A. Cross of Victoria; William Semple of Regina; Vincent Perry of Conoga Park, California, and O. C. Harriman of Pebble Beach, California.

Judge of the obedience trials will be Miss Joy Curran of Vancouver.

Junior handling classes for youngsters will be held on August 22 and 23. Judge of this event will be Mrs. Elsie Murray of Vancouver.

SEATTLE (AP)—Four years after the 1962 Seattle World's Fair, liquidating trustees are closing the books with a $99,508 profit for the state of Washington.

A report Tuesday gave that figure for the fair corporation with all assets accounted for, and all bills and claims settled. A rental claim from the city of Seattle for $812,000 was settled for $118,000, while more than a dozen lawsuits from concessionaires and others were solved for a total of about $700,000.

CARPENTERS SEND NOTICE FOR STRIKE

(See Page 18)

Strike notice expiring July 1 is being sent today to nearly 300 independent contractors in B.C. by the carpenters union.

The move follows an 87 per cent vote among about 3,000 carpenters favoring strike action.

About 270 contractors who bargain as one unit with another 3,500 carpenters have requested a government-supervised vote, now beginning to be taken.

A union spokesman said about 15 contractors in Victoria are affected. He declined to say whether, at the end of the holiday weekend, the carpenters will strike.

HEARING URGED

Committee Split On Campsite Plan

Saanich lands and planning committee recommended Tuesday night that public hearings be called into applications for a trailer campsite and a pet burial park.

Earlier, council referred the trailer campsite to the committee and decided against the animal cemetery.

Chairman Coun. William Campbell had to cast the deciding vote after a 2-2 tie on a motion for a public hearing on the campsite, at the northwest corner of Sayward and Lochside.

"I am totally and unalterably opposed to this use on this site," said Reeve Hugh Curtis.

"It would be folly to permit this use in an area destined to be residential."

He was supported by Coun. Digby Kier but Couns. Leslie Passmore and William Noel disagreed.

PREDICTS REJECTION

However, Coun. Passmore said while he disagrees, a public hearing "will be a waste of time" because it would be rejected.

The committee was told the planned campsite would only be used for four months in the summer for tourists. Trailers would be limited to 20 feet in length with no more than 40 on the 4.6-acre site.

On the pet burial park, applicant G. J. Thompson, 4987 Old West Saanich Road, said it would be no nuisance, inconvenience or embarrassment to anyone.

He believed animals should be disposed of in a hygienic manner. The cemetery would be situated on part of five acres of wooded property.

"NO HARM"

"I see no harm," said Coun. Noel. "A lot of pet lovers think more of their dogs than their mothers-in-law."

The committee will recommend to council that the previous motion rejecting the application be rescinded and the application reconsidered.

Another rezoning application turned down by council also got a recommended "no action" from the committee.

Mrs. M. C. Jaques, 5087 Del Monte Avenue, sought reconsideration of an application for boarding kennel and dog breeding.

Committee members stood by council's earlier objections to this use in a good residential district.

U.S. FIRM TO SURVEY CONVENTIONS

Victoria's convention centre committee agreed Tuesday to hire the Portland firm of Lund, McCutcheon and McBride to start a survey of convention needs in the city.

The Portland firm, one of two bidding for the job, will start its survey in about three weeks and have its report ready six weeks after the survey starts.

It will advise on the size of convention centre the city needs, the design and location of the building and how to attract more conventions to the city.

City council has earmarked $3,000 for the survey.
